Mayoral candidate charged in murder

EL PASO (AP) — A formal mayoral candidate was charged with murder Tuesday in the shooting of a man who was stealing cinder blocks from a mobile-home lot, police said.

James Corbett, 18, of El Paso, died after he was shot in the neck after he and a companion were caught stealing the cinder blocks Monday evening, police said.

Doyal Henderson, owner of Plains Mobile Homes in northeast El Paso, was charged with murder and released Tuesday morning from jail on $10,000 bond, officials said. Henderson ran unsuccessfully for mayor in 1977. Telephone calls to the business went unanswered Tuesday.

the car stopped in front of a friend's house, police said.

Hardwin banged on the door and asked the house's occupant, Joe Linden, to call an ambulance. Corbett was taken to William Beaumont Army Medical Center, where he died a short time later, officials said.

Linden said he and Corbett were both friends and were students at Parkland High School. He said Corbett might have wanted the blocks to raise his car while he worked on it.

State law allows property owners to use deadly force in defending their property in some situations, said Lt. Paul Saucedo of the Crimes Against Persons section. One of the requirements is that the crime has to take place at night, Saucedo said. The sun had not yet set at 5 p.m. Monday.

Police still hadn't determined Tuesday afternoon where Henderson was when he fired the shot, Grijalva said.

The cinder blocks are used to raise mobile homes off the ground. Hardwin, who was not injured, was charged with misdemeanor theft, Saucedo said.

Corbett and Victor Hardwin, 24, of El Paso, were trying to steal the cinder blocks from the Plains parking lot about 5 p.m. Monday when Henderson caught them, said police spokesman Lt. J.R. Grijalva.

The men fled in a small white car and Henderson fired at least one rifle shot at the car, Grijalva said. Witnesses said a bullet hole was in the car's back window after the shooting.

Corbett was struck in the back of the neck. He drove on for several blocks before slumping over, and

Scholar: Next first lady will be in bad situation

AUSTIN (AP) — The nation's next first lady will be in a "no-win situation" whether she is an activist such as Eleanor Roosevelt or a behind-the-scenes helpmate such as Bess Truman, says a University of Texas scholar who teaches a course on first ladies.

Dr. Lewis Gould, a history professor, said, "The American society doesn't really know what it wants from their first lady."

"Kitty Dukakis would very likely have a substantive agenda of policies," Gould said.

"She already is very much of an activist — a former member of the Holocaust Commission, interested in the homeless, refugees and the environment," he said.

"In contrast, Barbara Bush is identified with only one project — the promotion of literacy."

The first lady, Gould suggests, should be a traditional helpmate with a "modest" program of her own.

Gould, the author of the recent book, "Lady Bird Johnson and the Environment," has taught since 1982 a course on first ladies of the 20th century.

FBI must explain use of grand jury subpoena

EL PASO (AP) — A federal judge said the FBI must answer a complaint that it used a criminal grand jury subpoena to retaliate against a whistleblower.

U.S. District Judge Lucius Bunton ruled the FBI must explain in a Nov. 28 hearing why a criminal grand jury subpoena was used for an administrative investigation of agent Bernardo "Matt" Perez, who filed a class-action lawsuit against the bureau.

"The court is of the opinion that a response is required," Bunton wrote Friday. "If the subpoena was secured by an officer of the bureau, then it is strong evidence of retaliation. If the subpoena was wrongfully secured and no criminal or administrative sanction was brought against the FBI officer (Perez), then this is evidence in support of plaintiff's allegation of disparate treatment."

Bunton ruled Friday that the FBI discriminates against Hispanic agents in promotions and working conditions. Bunton also found that the FBI retaliated against Perez after he complained to the Equal Employment Opportunity Commission.

"The court specifically left unresolved the matter of a grand jury subpoena secured in the course of an administrative investigation of ... Perez after the date of his bringing an Equal Employment Opportunity complaint," Bunton wrote.

Bunton noted in his ruling that Perez may be the most carefully scrutinized special agent in the history of the bureau.

Though Perez was the target of investigations and serious accusations by others in the FBI, no meaningful breach of professional duty or law has even been demonstrated on his part, Bunton wrote.
