Robinson must stay in Navy for 6 months

WASHINGTON (AP) — Basketball star David Robinson must fulfill his obligation to the Navy before he can begin his pro career with the San Antonio Spurs and thus will not be playing in the NBA this season, the secretary of the Navy ruled Thursday.

Robinson, an ensign in the Navy and in the middle of his second year of active duty, said he accepted the ruling by Navy Secretary William Ball III and looked forward "to serving the remaining six months on active duty ... with pride."

An All-American while at the U.S. Naval Academy, the 7-foot-1 Robinson played with the U.S. Olympic team this summer. After the Olympics, he petitioned Ball to be released from active duty before completing his required two-year service commitment.

In return, Robinson suggested the Navy increase his obligation to the Naval Reserve.

Robinson has signed an eight-year, $26 million contract with the Spurs and hoped to begin his NBA career this year instead of waiting until next season. His two-year commitment to the Navy doesn't expire until May 17, 1989.

The Spurs traveled to Topeka, Kan., Thursday for an exhibition game and were not immediately available for comment on the ruling.

Ball, however, decided he was not going to tamper with the current Navy policies regarding active-duty servicemen and professional sports endeavors by providing Robinson with a special exemption, said one source, who asked not to be named.

The Navy declined to discuss Ball's decision beyond acknowledging that the secretary had spoken by telephone with Robinson Thursday.

Robinson, currently assigned to the Navy's Trident submarine base at Kings Bay, Ga., as a civil engineering officer, was not available for direct comment.

But his agent, Lee Fentress, released a statement in which Robinson complained about "inaccurate press reports" and said he was "proud to have been able to

High school team loses 15 starters to grades

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — San Antonio Memorial High School's football team, loser of 47 straight games, now has fallen victim to the academic game with 15 of 22 starters declared ineligible for Friday's game because of poor grades.

School officials announced Wednesday that 15 starters are ineligible under the state's no-pass, no-play rules.

The Minutemen are 0-7 for the season and 0-2 in district play and have lost 47 straight, the country's longest losing streak. There are 20 players available for Friday's game against Pleasanton.

"It kills us. I can't imagine us lining up and trying to play Friday," said Memorial coach Glenn Keller, in his first year at the school. "We lost our quarterback, our JV quarterback, and our backup varsity quarterback is injured."

"I'm about to go out (to practice) and see if we at least have a kid who can take a snap," he told the San Antonio Light Thursday.

The players available for Friday's game include 14 sophomores without varsity playing time.

It was the hardest the Minutemen have been hit since the controversial education reform law, House Bill 72, went into effect in 1985. Under the no-pass, no-play provisions, a student can not participate in extracurricular activities for six weeks if he fails one or more classes in a grading period. The first grading period ended last week, and ineligibility takes effect Friday.

Memorial was, by far, the hardest-hit local school. The average San Antonio varsity of 42 players lost only two members.

Edgewood Athletic Director Domingo Rangel Jr. said Wednesday that Memorial will play on Friday and will finish out the year.

"As long as we've got 11 kids to put on the field, we're going to do it," Rangel said. "I don't believe in it (forfeiture). The kids this year, they'll hang tough. They're strong. It's a letdown, but I don't think the kids will crumble."

Memorial would have to pay Pleasanton $500 if they forfeit the game. With three games remaining on the schedule, it would cost the Edgewood School District $1,500 to cancel the remainder of the season.

"I wouldn't be smiling myself in that situation," Rangel said. "It's difficult, but he (Keller) is a good coach. That's why he's here. I have faith in him."

Coaches have criticized the bill as being too tough on students who participate in extracurricular activities. Some coaches have advocated shorter ineligibility periods or using an average grade to determine eligibility.
