TBC subcommittee recommends halt to furlough system

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Convicted murderers, rapists and armed robbers will not be getting out of overcrowded Texas prisons through a furlough system until the Texas Board of Corrections can analyze the controversial program next month, a board subcommittee decided Thursday.

"We let someone with a murder background out. I don't think it's explainable," he said.

The program, in effect since 1977, still would allow burglars and thieves to apply for furloughs and would leave convicts' family emergency requests to the discretion of prison officials.

The three-member panel, headed by TBC chairman Charles Terrell of Dallas, voted to temporarily ban furloughs for violent and habitual criminals until a Nov. 14 meeting in Austin when the full nine-member board can discuss the matter after receiving reports from the Texas Department of Corrections.

The decision comes amid Republican criticism of a similar furlough program in Democratic presidential candidate Michael Dukakis' state of Massachusetts.

The TDC has released about 4,600 inmates in the furlough program since January 1987 and seven of the inmates committed crimes while on leave, officials said. Fourteen escaped.

The TDC has the nation's third-largest prison population — nearly 39,000 — and has had to release some prisoners early to avoid overcrowding.

Terrell said that because of the high-profile national campaign he decided to ask whether Texas had a similar program and was shocked to find that it did. He ordered an end to the weeklong program for murderers earlier this month.

The panel, which also included Allen Polunsky of San Antonio and Jerry Hodge of Amarillo, spent about 45 minutes Thursday discussing the issue, even praising the TDC staff for administering the program, before voting to recommend a temporary halt to part of it.

"There isn't a happy answer and there isn't an easy answer," Terrell said. "I don't want to be the one to explain to the victim or the victim's family why we let someone with a murder background out. I don't think it's explainable," he said.

"If we want to make a change here, we've to realize it will put pressures somewhere else and we must bite that bullet if we want to make that change and then we must say, 'We think that's justifiable' and face anyone that it upsets. We've got 6,000 or 7,000 or so backed up in our jails," Terrell said.

Jim Lynaugh, director of the TDC, said he did not know how prisoners would react to the temporary suspension of furloughs.

"The inmates that do go on furlough look forward to it. They are very protective of the program. They return simply because they want to go again," Lynaugh said.

"I don't know how many will continue to serve their time and get out as early as possible or how many in essence will say, 'Well you are not going to give me an award, I'm going to be bad, beat on everybody I see.' My guess is probably not very many will act up," Lynaugh said.

Gov. Bill Clements, co-chair of Republican presidential nominee George Bush's Texas campaign, has staunchly criticized the Massachusetts furlough program. He said Thursday he was not backing down from criticizing Dukakis and said the TBC would make changes to correct the Texas furlough program.

Rescheduling of Fall Review uncertain

It has not yet been decided whether the canceled Corps of Cadets Fall Review will be rescheduled.

Recent rainfall left Simpson Drill Field too wet for the march, which originally was scheduled for Thursday, said Madene Walker, secretary for the Office of the Commandant. This is the first time in two years that the review has been canceled.

Cadets were to be graded by officers on general appearance and military appearance.

Former student's art shown in MSC gallery

By Staci Finch Reporter

Texas A&M is well-known for its graduates in engineering and agriculture. But the University is not as famous for its art. However, William Herring, Class of '70, is beginning to change that.

Herring has become one of the foremost artists in the field of contemporary realism art. Samples of his work, along with that of Jan Herring, his equally famous mother, are on display in the MSC Gallery until Nov. 11.

Since graduating from A&M, Herring has kept in close contact with the school. The former member of E-2, the Corps outfit that takes care of Reveille, remembered his outfit with the recent donation of one of his pictures and a sketch of Reveille, to the MSC Permanent Gallery.

In addition to these gifts, Herring is working on a series of sketches portraying A&M traditions.

Herring did not immediately go into art after A&M.

Graduating with a degree in international relations and South American history, he worked in agriculture for a while, dairy farming with his father, then decided to pursue his love for art.

Since then he has won many awards and has served as a drawing instructor and an artist-in-residence.

Among his awards are the 1988 Muriel Alvord Award in watercolor by the Hudson Valley Art Association, the 1988 Gold Medal Award for watercolor by the El Paso Art Association, and the 1988 Honor Award for watercolor by the Academic Artists Association.

Herring travels several months out of the year, often returning with bags of photos, sketches and drawings. It is from these souvenirs that he paints his pictures.

Herring inherited his love and talent for painting from his mother: Although plagued by a bone ailment, Jan Herring continues to paint in her 100-year-old adobe house in Clint, Texas.

She also teaches and has published two books along with several articles for art books and magazines.

Her paintings appear in galleries all over the country, and she is considered a master in several forms of art.

Group: Drug war violates rights

AUSTIN (AP) — A group wanting to legalize marijuana said Thursday the Reagan Administration's war on drugs has become a war on the American people.

The Texas chapter of the National Organization for the Reform of Marijuana Laws (NORML) said, what it called the current "hysteria" over drugs, has prompted them to step up efforts to fight drug legislation they say violates citizens' civil liberties.

"The war on drugs is a war on the American people and their rights," Mike Kleinman, said.

Kleinman and a handful of supporters brought "drugs" to a news conference. They said they planned to distribute the drugs during an anti-drug rally Saturday by the Texans War on Drugs. Those drugs included cigarettes and candy, which the NORML group says are more dangerous than marijuana. They also brought empty beer cans.

A House sergeant-at-arms told them to take down a marijuana-leaf flag they had taped over a glass-encased photo of members of the 64th Legislature.

"We have gotten sick and tired over all the hypocrisy going on in this country over drugs," said Greg Clark, a member of the group and the Libertarian candidate for Travis County tax assessor-elect.

"We don't want to see these Texans take up crack or pain killers because they can no longer trust they are told by the authorities," said Donna Lee, regional coordinator of the Texans' War on Drugs, at a news conference as a spectator. In an interview later, she said the NORML group was wrong.

She said her group tries to get children to stay away from illegal and legal drugs, such as cigarettes and alcohol.
