Halloween is fun for the big kids, too

After weeks, months, and (it seems) years of waiting, the day is finally here: Halloween! Trick-or-treating! Harmless pranks! All the random activities generally associated with the absolutely greatest holiday in all of October (except Columbus Day).

Of course, sports personalities like to enjoy themselves just as much as normal people. So I thought you might be interested in hearing what some of them might be seen doing for entertainment this holiday season.

George Steinbrenner is having a big bash over at his place, and anyone who knows how to say "Yes sir" is invited. The person picked by George as having the best costume will be hired as his next manager.

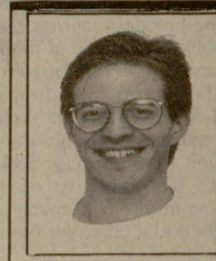

Steinbrenner himself will be dressed as Attila the Hun, a favorite historical character of George's. The list of celebrities expected to appear includes Red Sox Manager Joe Morgan (dressed as the Boston Strangler), Jack Clark (the invisible man), and Billy Martin (as Whitey Herzog).

Mike Tyson, with the holiday season coinciding happily with the loss of his marriage, is naturally holding a party of his own. He'll be dressed as his soon-to-be-former mother-in-law — the only costume he could think of scarier than he is.

Robin Givens is counter-partying. She has retracted a previous statement and announced that a $20 entry fee will not, after all, be required at the door. She doesn't want to give the impression that all she wants out of life is money. Oh yes, she will be dressing up as Glinda, the good witch of the North. Appropriate, she thought.

The two parties may wind up merging, however, as Tyson is planning to egg and wrap the Givens estate sometime during the wee hours of tomorrow morning. If the world is lucky, the two will manage to avoid each other.

The NFL will have its own little party, which promises to be a real wing-dinger. Pete Rozelle (in costume as Pete Ueberroth) will chair, as usual.

Tom Landry has said he will be there. Word has it he will be dressed as Rodney Dangerfield. His date, of course, will be Steve Pelluer. The world's next Gary Hogeboom is expected to dress as Roger Staubach. Hershel Walker is expected to make an appearance, too — dressed as Rudolph Nureyev. Count on William Perry being there — it's a party, isn't it? The Fridge will be dressed as Richard Simmons, mainly to impress Mike Ditka, another probable in the lineup. Ditka will dress as Buddy Ryan — Landry's second choice.

John Madden will be there if there's any Miller Lite or endorsement contracts to be found. He'll come dressed as an airplane.

This just in: Oiler Head Coach Jerry Glanville is not going to use his tickets, but he has arranged for someone in an Elvis Presley outfit to pick them up at the door.

Jackie Sherrill is expected to show up sometime tonight as well. The A&M head coach had no comment on the matter, nor would he comment on his recent purchase of a Pope outfit.

The story is riling Southwest Conference officials because it would mean Sherrill missing the big SWC shindig that's going down at conference HQ.

That makes David McWilliams the big enchilada at the party. The UT coach will be dressed as Darrell Royal, of course. He's bringing Kent Hackman to the entire defensive backfield (dressed, respectively, as a mountain and a sieve — no costumes required in either case).

Ken Hatfield is coming as Jackie Sherrill, and bringing offensive guard Freddie Childress — dressed as William Perry. Jim Wacker is hacked that the costume shop gave the Sherrill suit to Hatfield and sent him to Gerry Faust. He is not expected to appear.

Forrest Gregg, the new SMU head coach, is expected to dress as Jonas Salk, complete with polio vaccine. Jack Pardee is coming as a good sport.

Don't count on Tommy Lasorda being there. He's throwing his own party over in LA, and Italians everywhere are invited.

Orel Hershiser will be there of course, complete with Lee Majors costume. Fernando Valenzuela is coming as the Pillsbury Doughboy.

Astros owner John McMullen, fresh off another questionable dismissal of an Astro official, will come as the Space Shuttle launchpad. He's coming with Knepper, who's coming as Gloria Steinem.

The Oakland A's are once again not expected to show up. Bob Uecker is not invited.

Two notable party animals — Mary Lou Retton and Joe Piscopo — were ready to get down with themselves, dressed respectively as a bottle of maple syrup and a comedian. Both found their mailboxes surprisingly empty the last couple of weeks. Pity.

The media party, planned by Brent Musberger, should be somewhat more subdued, since Musberger is elsewhere. The only character of note scheduled to show is Bob Costas, who will be coming as David Letterman. Musberger is planning to dress as himself. Looks like a good night to stay in.

Cards come back to win as Cowboys drop to 2-6

IRVING (AP) — A 42-yard pass from Neil Lomax to wide receiver Ernie Jones set up Earl Ferrell's one-yard touchdown plunge with 50 seconds to play Sunday as the Phoenix Cardinals came from behind to defeat the Dallas Cowboys 16-10.

Phoenix, breaking a 2-game losing streak, improved to 5-4 for the season. Dallas, off to its worst start in a quarter-century, fell to 2-7.

Ferrell also had a 14-yard touchdown pass from Lomax and a 47-yard run that set up a field goal.

Lomax, scrambling near midfield, located Jones all alone, crossing over the middle at the Dallas 35. Jones bounced off Dallas safety Michael Downs at the 25 and darted to the 3-yard line before Everson Walls shoved him out of bounds. Ferrell scored two plays later.

Phoenix fell behind 10-0 in the third quarter, but Ferrell's 47-yard run set up Al Del Greco's 32-yard field goal with 2:38 left in the period.

Ferrell took a 14-yard pass from Lomax to tie the score with 7:53 left in the game.

After a scoreless first half, Dallas took a 3-0 lead in the third quarter on Roger Ruzek's 39-yard field goal.

Their next possession, the Cowboys went 80 yards in four plays. Herschel Walker's 27-yard run, his second-longest of the season, put Dallas near midfield. Two plays later, Steve Pelluer — hurrying to avoid a safety blitz — hit wide receiver Ray Alexander between two falling defenders for a 50-yard touchdown pass.

Phoenix cornerback Cedric Mack set up the Cardinals' winning eight-play, 61-yard touchdown drive by outleaping Cowboys wide receiver Kelvin Martin for an interception off Pelluer at the Cardinal 30 and 9-yard return with 3:47 remaining.

Lomax completed 13 of 32 passes for 175 yards with no interceptions, although he was sacked four times for 40 yards in losses.

Pelluer completed 9 of 31 for 132 yards and was sacked four times for 29 yards in losses.

Ferrell gained 110 yards in 19 carries for Phoenix and also had four receptions for 51 yards. Walker had 87 yards in 17 carries for Dallas.

Phoenix mounted the only serious scoring threat of the first half. Lomax completed passes of 9 yards to Jones and 14 yards to tight end Jay Novacek as the Cardinals moved to the Dallas 19.

On fourth-and-seven from the 16, Phoenix set up for a 33-yard field goal try. But Lomax, holding for Del Greco, couldn't handle Scott Dill's low snap and was tackled at the 24 by Cowboys cornerback Robert Williams.

Midway through the second quarter, from the Dallas 44, Lomax threw a bomb to wide receiver Roy Green, who had gotten behind Williams downfield. But Williams recovered to make a leaping deflection at the 15, saving an apparent touchdown.

Hogs clinch Cotton Bowl with Rice win

Associated Press

It took a trifecta to pull it off but the ranked Arkansas took care of business and holds its first winning ticket to Cotton Bowl since 1976.

All three games on Saturday's Southwest Conference card had to fall in place for the Razorbacks capture the title on the earliest date in league history.

Texas Tech had to beat Texas Tech Red Raiders, trailing 32-15 in the third quarter, rallied to a heart-stopping victory.

Houston had to beat Texas Tech. After falling behind 9-0 in the quarter, sophomore quarterback Warren Ware came on to throw three touchdown passes, leading the Cougars to a 40-10 victory.

Finally, after the day games had been decided, the Razorbacks had to winless Rice.

They completed the final move by breaking a 14-14 tie on John Blanton's yard touchdown run with 14:07 left for a 21-14 victory.

"This team isn't always pretty but stay in the fight," Arkansas Coach Ken Hatfield said. "A lot of times a team is favored tightens up at home and too hard."

The Razorbacks tried just hard and came away with their eighth consecutive victory this season and a 5-0 SWC record.

Texas and TCU each suffered a second league loss, meaning the Razorbacks could lose their final two SWC games against Baylor and Texas A&M and advance to the Cotton Bowl.

The Razorbacks have beaten a team that could tie them for the title the event of a tie, head-to-head would be the tie-breaker.

Texas A&M is 4-3 for the season, 4-0 in SWC games but they are NCAA probation and ineligible for SWC crown.

The Razorbacks have three games remaining, including a season-ending match at Miami, but they're expected to host the Cotton Bowl for the first time since they beat Georgia 31-10 in 1987.
