UT students rally to hear Jackson

AUSTIN (AP) — The Rev. Jesse Jackson told a University of Texas rally Monday to "keep hope alive" for a Democratic presidential victory and denounced the Republican ticket of George Bush and Dan Quayle.

"We are going to take off the Bush-Quayle mask," Jackson said. "We will not have Halloween November the eighth. We will not get the trick, while they get the treat," he said to a spirited crowd of about 3,000 people at the UT campus.

He urged the crowd, comprised of mostly students, to vote for Democratic candidate Michael Dukakis. "We can win Texas. We can win America," he said.

Jackson's speech dovetailed with a move by Dukakis on Sunday to defend liberal traditions.

Jackson said to the crowd that certain conservative values should be cherished, but that conservative politicians have stood in the way of progress in civil rights.

He said, "And if conservatives had had their way, the sign on the Statue of Liberty would have said, 'No room in the inn. You don't have any property. You don't speak English. You can't come.' But the liberal tradition said, 'Give me your poor, your huddled masses.'"

He said liberals have fought for Medicare, Social Security and housing for the poor. Jackson added that Bush runs a campaign implying that civil liberties are subversive. "We must stand for civil liberties," he said.

Jackson said Bush was raising false issues, such as the Pledge of Allegiance, while Dukakis addressed issues important to the country.

"The problem is not at all about saluting the flag," Jackson said. "The problem is that most Americans in the textile industry who used to grow the cotton or weave it, who used to make those flags now do not have their jobs. They have the Cotton Bowl once a year. They don't have the textile industry the rest of the year."

He blasted the current Reagan-Bush administration for economic problems and foreign policy disasters. Of the national debt and trade deficit, he said, "That's not conservatism. That's ridiculous."

"We're becoming overdependent again on foreign oil, foreign capital and foreign energy with oilwells capped in Texas, Oklahoma and Louisiana," he said. "Let's uncup these wells. Let's put America back to work."

In Edinburg earlier Monday, Jackson, wearing a red bandanna on his arm in support of the United Farm Workers union, led a march of about 200 students and farm workers from Pan American University about one-half mile to the Hidalgo County Courthouse. The goal was to bring out early absentee voters for Dukakis-Bentsen.

Marchers chanted, "Keep hope alive. Vote."

"George Bush, as he wants to cut off housing and national health care, says
