Reagan will promote Bush at rally held in Dallas arena

DALLAS (AP) — President Reagan will give a last-minute boost to George Bush and the Texas Republican ticket with a rally Saturday at an arena rodeo arena, said State GOP Chairman Fred Meyer, who predicted strong turnout at the polls.

Meyer contended Democratic vice presidential hopeful Lloyd Bentsen, has lost credibility with Texas voters.

Bentsen is also running for the U.S. Senate.

The rally is scheduled for 2 p.m. at Mesquite Rodeo Arena, which is near Interstate 635 in the Mesquite suburb east of Dallas.

Gov. Bill Clements, Sen. Phil Gramm, former Sen. John Tower and George Bush Jr. also will attend, along with various other candidates for state office.

"In this visit, President Reagan is going to come in and raise our level of enthusiasm and we are going to work right until 7 o'clock on Nov. 8 to deliver the biggest vote we can for George Bush and all of the rest of our candidates," Meyer said.

He said voters are beginning to realize that Bentsen, who is running against Republican Beau Boulter in the Senate race, supports stands of Democratic presidential hopeful Michael Dukakis that most Texans oppose.

Mark Sanders, spokesman for Bush's state campaign, said, "It's the last few days of the campaign... we wanted to bring out one of our biggest guns."

John Sharp, chairman of the Dukakis-Bentsen campaign, said in a statement that this "hastily pulled together Texas schedule for President Ronald Reagan has just been constructed."

"Combined with Gov. Dukakis' and Sen. Bentsen's aggressive campaigning of late and the release of the new poll numbers for Texas, the Republicans are beginning to get nervous about winning Bush's 'home state' of Texas," Sharp said.

"If the GOP has a 'lock' on Texas, then we must ask why one of the scheduled stops for Reagan is the Republican stronghold of Dallas.

"This new 'Reagan poll' is concerning what our internal tracking polls the public polls are revealing," he said.

"Lloyd Bentsen's stature and coattails are making this a horse race in Texas."

Both Reggie Bashur, deputy campaign director for Bush's Texas campaign, and Sanders discounted the comments.

Sanders said the visit has been planned for about a week.

"We're delighted he's coming," Bashur said, adding that officials expect Reagan return to Texas after his appearance earlier in the campaign.

"We are not taking anything granted," Meyer said.

"We want that big turnout at the rally that Jack Rains projected."

The bigger the turnout, the bigger the Republican victory.

"I hope that 78 percent or more of 6,000,000 voters go to the polls on election day."

Millions of Mexicans spend day in cemeteries

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Millions of Mexicans spent Wednesday at cemeteries in observance of the Day of the Dead, listening to music, talking to friends and taking gifts of flowers and food to deceased relatives who are said to drop by for a visit.

The small cemetery of Mixquic in southeastern Mexico City was crowded with people cleaning and adorning the graves of their relatives with the traditional Cempasuchil flowers, a type of marigold.

Anita Ramirez, 15, put flowers on the grave of brother Haracio, who died when she was only one year old.

"I came here to remember him even though I didn't know him really when he was alive," she said. "He was my brother."

She said her parents were among hundreds of vendors selling everything from candy skulls to cardboard skeletons that dance when you pull a string.

The Day of the Dead, which follows All Souls Day, stretches back to the times of the Aztecs and is a mix of beliefs that include the ideas that the dead are never far away and that the line between life and death is blurred.

Symbols of death are everywhere in the weeks leading up to the Day of the Dead. Bakery shelves sport bread in the shape of bones and sugar skulls with the names of the dead and the living. Friends exchange poems that jokingly refer to each other's funerals.

Families make altars in their homes and fill them with flowers and the favorite foods of their dead relatives. The same is done at cemeteries, where families wait to eat until they believe the dead have had their fill.

The Day of the Dead has come under cultural attack in recent years as many upper class Mexicans adopted Halloween garb and practices, including plastic masks and pumpkins.

Miguel Angel Munez, 24, was putting flowers on the grave of his father, who had died 14 years before.

"We come here on this day to be with the people we love. They say they come back this day and we can be with them," Munez said.

The cemetery church, San Asa, had a traditional Day of the Dead altar with a picture of Jesus Christ as a terpiece. Offerings of fruit, bread, candles, and sugar skulls crowded on the altar.

At the cemetery of Mixquic, in an area east of the city, candle-holding students began visiting the cemetery Tuesday night.

Official: 6 million will vote in Texas

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State Jack Rains is predicting that nearly 6 million Texas voters will cast ballots in this year's general election, a record, his office said Wednesday.

Rains projects that a total of 5.988 million of the state's 8.2 million registered voters will cast ballots, a turnout of 73 percent.

"That would be the highest number since this office began keeping accurate records in 1973," Randy Erben, assistant secretary of state, said.

The presence of Texans on each presidential ticket is a big reason for the prediction, Erben said.

Republican presidential nominee George Bush and the Democratic vice presidential candidate, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, both are from Texas. Bentsen also is running for re-election to the Senate.

"He (Rains) thinks Bush and Bentsen, the (state) Supreme Court races, is senter voting liberalization and other factors, such as some hot local races a record number of registered voters means a huge turnout," Erben said.

Erben said that if the 73 percent turnout prediction proves accurate on Nov. 8, it will mean that 48.8 percent of all eligible Texans voted, "which is almost a record."

In the 1984 presidential election, a total of 5.38 million votes were cast. In 1980 presidential total was 4.5 million.

A big factor in this year's high voter prediction is the new absentee voting law, which allows people to cast absentee ballots without giving a reason.

Absentee voting ends Friday, but Erben said it already has generated much interest.
