A&M Symphonic Band kicks off season

Variety will highlight the Texas A&M University Symphonic Band's season-opening concert Thursday at 8 p.m. in Rudder Auditorium.

The program will include "American Overture for Band" by J. W. Jenkins, "Irish Tune from County Derry" and "Shepherd's Hey" by Percy Grainger and Alfred Reed's "El Camino Real."

The band's conductor, Ray Toler, became a member of the A&M staff last spring after retiring from the Air Force. The concert will be his first with the A&M band.

"The show will have a great variety of music," he said. "We're trying to play something for everyone."

A symphonic medley of Cole Porter tunes, John Philip Sousa's popular "The Stars and Stripes Forever" and several other pieces also will be performed.

Ticket prices for the concert are $3 for students and $5 for the general public. Tickets may be purchased at the door the night of the performance.

Lecture to focus on ethnic settlement

Ethnic settlement of the Brazos Valley will be discussed in a lecture by A&M geology professor Peter Hugill Thursday at 7:30 p.m. at the College Station Community Center.

Hugill is author of "Transfer & Transformation of Ideas & Material Culture."

The lecture is free and open to the public.

Question of lottery raised by officials

AUSTIN (AP) — Two state lawmakers said Tuesday they will carry lottery legislation in the next session, estimating the game would produce $600 million a year that could be used to fund state services.

"Obviously, the more money we need ... the easier it's going to be to get support for a lottery, because the only other realistic alternative is a state income tax, which no one likes," said Rep. Ron Wilson, D-Houston.

The state is facing some issues — like a court ruling that, if upheld, would require a revamped public school finance system — that could be expensive and could be paid for with proceeds from a state lottery, Wilson said.

If predictions of a budget surplus are correct, said Sen. Hector Uribe, D-Brownsville, lottery proceeds could be used to finance services and thereby give tax relief to Texans.

"The way you give people in the state of Texas a tax break is by raising revenues without raising taxes."

But Phil Strickland, director of the Texas Baptist Christian Life Commission, said the lottery revenue estimate is exaggerated. The game is harmful because it preys on the misfortune of those who play, he added.

"It makes it the vested interest of the state to create as many gamblers, and thus as many losers, as possible. The more people who lose their money, the more money the state makes," Strickland said. "It is a terrible conflict of interest between the state and its citizens."

Public opinion polls indicate Texans support the lottery more than three-to-one, Uribe said. He said lottery proponents should let lawmakers know of their support for the measure, which would require a constitutional amendment.

The Senate in 1985 approved lottery legislation, but it was not passed by the House. Wilson said it is likely a provision dedicating lottery proceeds to a certain budget item — like education or criminal justice — will be needed to gain House members' support.
