five $100 bills. The News also reported it has in excess of eight hours of tape-recorded interviews with Smith.

In those interviews, Smith reportedly told the News that he received approximately $10,000 from Sherrill and his staff in the form of money, benefits and airline tickets.

The News reported that Robert Smith said Sherrill did not deny sending money to George Smith, but that Sherrill maintained he was being coerced.

Smith was highly recruited as a high school athlete. He attended A&M from the summer of 1982 until early 1984. In 1984 he quit the team and transferred to Clemson University.

The News reported that Smith said he had been contacted Wednesday night by Coach Pugh's wife. The story states that Smith said as a result of that conversation he would refuse to stand by the statements he made in the tape-recorded interviews. A notarized, sworn statement was signed by Smith before the interview that he would "be truthful in the information he provides," the story says.

However, Smith later tried to deny what he said during the interview, according to the article.

The News quotes Smith as saying, "If I say it didn't happen, nothing happened." Smith is also quoted as saying Pugh, who recruited him, is being treated unfairly by Sherrill as the allegations unfold.

Smith originally signed a letter of intent with the University of Georgia. He later gave the NCAA information about improper recruiting practices by a Georgia coach.

Smith then signed with A&M. The News reported that at the time Smith denied he was never offered any illegal inducements to sign with A&M. However, the News quotes Smith as saying Sherrill promised to "take care of me" and provide a good-paying job. The job was working around Sherrill's house according to the article.

The News quotes Smith: "I said, 'Well, coach, how will I get home in the winter months or for the Christmas breaks and things of that nature. He said, 'We can get you a summer job. That's not against the rules. Also I have work that I need done around my house. We can work that out. And I can pay you what I want to pay you.'"

"Once he told me he was going to take care of me and I wouldn't have to worry about nothing, I said, 'OK. I'm coming to school here.'"

The article also quotes Smith as saying a member of Sherrill's staff arranged to sell his complimentary tickets.

According to the News Smith said, "He just told me, 'I got a guy that's gonna take care of your tickets and you need to be patient. He'll come by and holler at you after the ball games. He'll be in the dressing room.'"

The man is identified in the article as "Bill from Lampasas (Texas)."

The News reported that Sherrill confronted Smith and told him the alumni transactions were too risky.

Smith is quoted as saying, "He came to me and told me that he didn't want me dealing with that guy any longer. He said, 'If you need anything, you come to me from now on.'"

The article says Smith and Sherrill struck an agreement about future cash payments for living expenses during the summer of 1983.

Smith reportedly told the News that he asked Sherrill for money for the season as well as how it would be handled.

The News quotes Smith as saying Sherrill replied, "Well, I don't want you selling your tickets to anyone. What you do is... you come to me and I'll let you go over to my house and work and earn it. Nobody told me how much I can pay you."

Smith told the News that when he showed up to do yard work Sherrill just asked him how much money he needed.

The News quotes Smith as saying Sherrill would give him anywhere from $200 to $400 whenever he asked.

After his freshman year Smith decided to leave A&M. The News quotes Smith

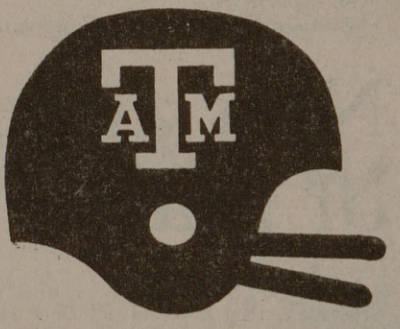

The following statement was issued by Lane Stephenson, Director of Public Information for Texas A&M, on behalf of President William H. Mobley.

The Battalion received the statement at 10:40 a.m. today.

"We are in the process as I speak of attempting to ascertain the facts from among a series of conflicting statements. We learned of the allegations Wednesday and immediately notified the NCAA in conjunction with starting our own internal investigation.

"A critical facet of the matter in our opinion is that after learning of the content of the Dallas Morning News story before publication, the young man involved called Mr. Robert Smith, the University's officer in charge of NCAA compliance matters, and essentially denied the allegations to be published.

"University officials are in the process of setting up a meeting as soon as possible with the young man to determine the facts in the form of a sworn statement. We also will be seeking sworn statements from everyone else involved, including Athletic Department personnel."

A copy of a Federal Express mailing label on a package sent to George Smith is shown above. The name Bob MATEY, a member of Sherrill's staff, appears on the label as the sender of the package. According to the Dallas Morning News Smith said the envelope contained $500 in cash. The envelope was sent from Bryan Smith in Atlanta. It was sent Sept. 13, four days after A&M announced the results of an investigation by the NCAA. The label accompanied a copyrighted story in today's edition of the News.

as saying Sherrill helped him transfer to Clemson. He is also quoted as saying Sherrill provided him spending money and a plane ticket.

Smith is quoted as saying he estimated he received more than $10,000 in cash, benefits and plane tickets while at A&M.

According to the article, Smith contacted Sherrill again as the NCAA investigation into the A&M football program started.

By this time he had quit school and applied for early eligibility for the 1986 professional draft, according to the News. The News quotes Smith as saying he decided to expose Sherrill because of anger. Smith is quoted as saying he expected Sherrill to provide around $3,000 for vocational school tuition in one lump sum, but the money kept coming in small amounts.

"I wanted him to send me back to school," the News quotes Smith as saying. "I wanted to finish up. That's what I really wanted. . . . He owes me a degree. I would never have left A&M if I hadn't gotten screwed by the coaching staff. So I got screwed out of graduating from there. . . .

"All this was done to keep me quiet for a couple of months." Several A&M football players contacted by The Battalion said they had comment and were waiting for a meeting to be held with the coaches. They said they first heard of the charges this morning.

Jeff Henry, recruiting coordinator for A&M, said he did not know about the charges until he heard the radio report of the allegations today.
