Central Americans seek shelter in Brownsville

BROWNSVILLE (AP)—Central Americans and other asylum-seekers in southern Texas need federal humanitarian relief — possibly shelter — while their cases are decided, U.S. Rep. Solomon Ortiz said.
The Corpus Christi Democrat planned to join a special Justice Department team Tuesday in taking a first-hand look at the immigrants' needs.
"The current crisis in Cameron County is a direct result of a national policy, and therefore requires a federal solution," Ortiz said.
His district includes the southern tip of the state, the crossing point for more than 30,000 asylum applicants last year, according to the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

"We cannot have a refugee policy that encourages people to come to this country to apply for political asylum, then leave them on the streets to freeze and starve," Ortiz said. "All this does is create a health hazard and burden the local community."
The problem of homeless immigrants worsened here after the INS on Dec. 16 adopted a procedure designed to keep asylum-seekers in the Lower Rio Grande Valley during the 30 days or more it would take to decide their claims for refugee status.
Hundreds of Central Americans, no longer able to travel to their U.S. destinations to seek asylum, began camping in empty lots and condemned buildings.

U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela on Monday freed the aliens to travel again when he blocked the 3-week-old INS policy until Thursday, when the judge filed against the immigration service.
Despite the order, Ortiz said there still is need for sheltering the immigrants. "There's a lot of people coming through the pipeline," he said.
The congressman said he would survey the situation in Cameron County with a three-member team arriving from the Justice Department's Community Relations Service in Washington.

Auhtorities find clues of bombing

LONDON (AP) — The bomb that blew up Pan Am Flight 103 ruptured the fuselage in the area of the cargo hold just ahead of the wing, and probably contained Semtex plastic explosives, authorities said Tuesday.
"Initial examinations have established that the explosive device ruptured the fuselage on the left side in the area of the No. 1 cargo-baggage hold just forward of the wing," a bulletin from the Air Accidents Investigation Branch said.
It did not say what explosives were used, but Transport Secretary Paul Channon said it was probably Semtex.
The authorities did not say how they arrived at their conclusions.
Semtex, made in Czechoslovakia, is a powerful plastic explosive that is difficult to detect and is believed to be available to several terrorist groups.
The indications that Semtex was used point to some "well-organized and well-supplied terrorist group," Channon told Parliament.
"It is too early to say yet where the article which contained the explosive originated," he said.
Although Czechoslovakia denied it was Semtex that blew up Flight 103 on Dec. 21, it is sending four experts to Britain to assist the investigation. Foreign Office Minister William Waldegrave said they would arrive Wednesday and Thursday.
Flight 103 blew up at 31,000 feet, killing all 259 people on board and 11 on the ground in Lockerbie, the Scottish town that bore the brunt of the falling debris.
Channon rejected accusations that the government refrained from warning the public of a bomb threat against Pan Am.
Referring to evidence that U.S. embassies were warned of a specific threat to blow up a Pan Am flight from Frankfurt to London, he said such warnings were constantly being received, and where changes are needed in airport security, these were implemented.
But in this case, he said, the British were given to understand that the threat "had little credibility."

Soldiers arrest union leader after Mexico City gun battle

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Soldiers arrested Oil Workers Union boss Joaquin Hernandez Galicia and other union leaders in a gun battle at his home Tuesday in an essentially political crackdown on what is known as the most powerful and allegedly corrupt union in Mexico.
One federal agent was killed in the gunfire between soldiers, agents and bodyguards at Hernandez Galicia's home in the northeastern oil city of Ciudad Madero, an Attorney General's Office said.
It said he was accused of illegal amassing of weapons and smuggling of weapons barred by law.
An estimated 6,000 oil workers and their supporters walked off their jobs in Mexico City, where the headquarters of the state-owned oil monopoly Pemex is located, and marched to the huge Zocalo Plaza shouting "Freedom for Joaquin," known as "La Quina."
The Mexican Labor Federation, or CTM, protested the arrest and workers also left their jobs at Petroleos Mexicanos installations in the Tampico-Ciudad Madero area in the northeast to demand his release.

More than 200 Uzi automatics and 40 other weapons, along with 300,000 bullets were found in the house, the Attorney General's Office said.
"The finding and possession of those weapons and bullets in the house permit the presumption of responsibility of the people arrested for investigation," the Attorney General's office statement said.
Longtime labor leader Fidel Velazquez, head of the CTM, said he would demand Hernandez Galicia's release.
"I am worried, disgusted, because I can't allow this to happen in Mexico," he said in a news conference.
A statement from the CTM, the largest labor federation and part of the ruling Institutional Revolutionary Party, called the arrest "arbitrary and with excessive display of force."
"We reject what has happened because, if it is not corrected, it could open a stage in the life of the country that no one wants: the stage of authoritarianism that could lead, in turn, to anarchy and reactionary violence," the statement said.
Barragan Camacho was said to be at CTM headquarters.

Witnesses to the arrest said Hernandez Galicia was still wearing only his undershorts when soldiers took him from his home to an airplane about 9 a.m. Tuesday, Diaz de la Garza said.
Newspapers and television stations, reflecting the government view and longstanding criticism of corruption against someone tied to the government for years, exuberantly praised his arrest.
"At Last 'La Quina Fell,'" read a banner headline in three-inch letters in a special edition of the newspaper Excelsior.
