Dallas Carter's 5A state grid title faces final test in Texas legislature predominantly black.

AUSTIN (AP) — Controversy surrounding Dallas Carter High School's state football championship, which is under challenge in the courts, bounced on new turf Wednesday — the Legislature.
State Rep. Fred Hill, R-Richardson, filed a bill that would make the Texas Education Agency commissioner the final authority in disputes over whether a student is academically eligible to participate in extracurricular activities.

Carter won the Class 5A football title despite a determination by TEA Commissioner William N. Kirby that a student on the team had failed a class and was ineligible to play.

Carter officials said the failing grade given to defensive back Gary Edwards was due to a miscalculation, and that Edwards actually passed. The Dallas school district fought the TEA, the University Interscholastic League, and other schools Carter defeated in the playoffs in state district court. Carter won a court orteam to continue playing football. A trial on the merits
