Common interview questions

"You never get a second chance to make a first impression."

Although this sounds like a cliché, it is an important phrase to remember when preparing resumes or interviewing for a job, Kendra Williams, vice president of claims at American General Life Insurance, said Tuesday in a job search seminar.

As part of the series of lectures, "Placement Center Events for Liberal Arts Students," Williams gave advice about preparing good resumes and interviewing skills—and making a good first impression with them.

"The interview, the resumé, the letter that you write and the first time you meet the person—all of those are your first impression," Williams said. "And it's almost like a game. It's who can outwit the other one."

"If I interview you, I'm going to be trying to find out what your faults are. You're trying to make a favorable impression, and I'm trying to figure out if you're fit for the job or not."

By discussing the most common mistakes in resumé writing, Williams illustrated how to write a good resumé. She said trying to put too much information into the resumé is the biggest problem people face.

"Remember that what your re-
