Dallas Gay Alliance continues service despite fire, theft

DALLAS (AP) — It will take more than theft of computers, rifling of files and a six-alarm fire to put the Dallas Gay Alliance out of business, its president said Friday as operations continued unabated at makeshift quarters a block from the gutted building.

"If it were the arsonist's intentions to halt our work, it didn't happen," said William Waybourn, president of the alliance, which operates several outreach programs, including the AIDS Resource Center of Dallas that also was housed in the destroyed building.

"The fire set us back an hour; that's how much they halted our service to the gay community and to people with AIDS," he said. "We deal with AIDS day-in and day-out. Believe me, a fire we can handle."

The Gay Alliance was one of three businesses destroyed early Thursday in a six-alarm fire in the Oak Lawn area about two miles north of downtown Dallas.

Investigators ruled the center was set afire about 5:30 a.m. Thursday after its offices were ransacked and computers and legal documents stolen. Arson investigators said they had no suspects.

No confidential information about AIDS clients was taken, Waybourn said.

"Those files won't mean anything to anybody except us," he said. "We've always been an open organization. They could have gotten the same information just by calling us."

Missing documents included papers concerning efforts to have state district Judge Jack Hampton removed from office, Waybourn said.

Dallas Gay Alliance offices had been a center of activity for attempts to oust Hampton since December when he was quoted in a newspaper article as saying he had given a lighter sentence to a killer because the two victims were, in the judge's words, "queers."

City fire Capt. W.R. Young said diagnostic tests on samples taken from the fire scene were taken to Parkland Hospital Medical Examiner's lab to be tested. He said the tests to determine how the fire was started probably would be completed by Monday.

Arson investigators suspect a petroleum product may have been used to ignite the fire because of the intense heat it generated, fire officials said.

Meanwhile, Waybourn said all services continued Friday thanks to an outpouring of community support, including donations of equipment and furniture.

He said an electronic security alarm system and 24-hour security guards had been donated.

Waybourn also said a new weekly program of low-cost anonymous testing for the HIV virus associated with acquired immune deficiency syndrome was launched Thursday afternoon as planned, albeit to a lower number than expected.

"We only had a few people come by for it," Waybourn said. "But I think that's because of all the TV cameras — that makes it hard to be anonymous."

Damage caused by the fire, which quickly spread through a common attic in the strip shopping center on Cedar Springs to several businesses, was estimated at $750,000, said fire Capt. J.E. Foster. No injuries were reported.

Union Jack Hair Cutters clothing store and the Round-Up Saloon also were damaged by the fire, which was brought under control about 7 a.m.

Destroyed in the fire were six compressors used to administer an experimental pentamidine AIDS treatment for 80 patients per month.

Waybourn said the center had some insurance "but not enough to cover our losses. It's hard to get coverage on a facility like ours."
