Bush's bootmaker gets business boost

HOUSTON (AP) — When President Bush pulled up his pant leg and showed off his cowboy boots during an inaugural ball, Rocky Carroll couldn't have asked for better advertising.

Longtime customers to Carroll's Houston boot shop say his business has soared so much you have to drive around the block a couple of times in order to get a parking place in front.

Others clad in Carroll-made boots include some Texas A&M University senior cadets, former Texas Gov. John Connally, actor Patrick Swayze, race car driver A.J. Foyt, several Houston Oilers, Houston and Dallas police officers and Ringling Brothers clowns.

01301702 For Carroll, making boots for Bush, former President Reagan or anyone else is a joy.

"I love what I do," said Carroll, who learned the craft from his parents and has passed the trade to his son and daughter, who operate two other shops in Houston. "Making boots and shoes is a dying art."

"I was raised in a shoe shop. My mother said I used to suck on a leather heel and cut my first tooth on an old heel," said Carroll, whose grandparents started the family boot making business in Tenaha in East Texas.

He recalls making his first pair of boots in his father's shop when he was 10. Since 1956 he has been creating personalized designs for cowboys, businessmen, politicians and anyone else who calls or stops by his RJ's Boot Co.

Bush's office called before his recent Far East trip. The request: four pairs of boots.

The call came on a Friday afternoon. The White House wanted the boots by Tuesday. The president was leaving Wednesday.

No problem.

Carroll made the boots — including a black pair with a Chinese flag on the front of one and an American flag on its companion — and had them in Washington by Monday night.

Bush gave a pair to Chinese Premier Li Peng, who said he'd probably wear them on his visit to the United States.

Carroll says he's honored Bush asked him to make the boots and is just as honored to make boots for Bush himself. He made the first pair for Bush in about three days, at the request of Houston Police Department officers who escort Bush through town when he visits.

The black size 11D had the outline of the state of Texas with the Texas flag inside and his initials on the side.

Bush apparently showed off his boots to Reagan, who turned around and called Carroll himself. Reagan ordered two pair — size 10½B — of brown and black ostrich and invited Carroll to the White House.

He and his wife made their first trip to Washington on Dec. 15 to deliver the boots to Reagan. Carroll also gave another pair to Bush, this time black alligator with the presidential seal.

"When we went into the oval office, he and the president were teasing each other saying, 'My boots are better looking than yours,'" Carroll said. "Bush was like a kid with a new toy."

"Reagan said his boots were like putting on a pair of socks," Carroll recalls, saying that was one of his greatest compliments.

Cowboys especially boost business during the annual Houston Livestock Show and Rodeo with orders for handmade boots that range in price from $295 to $6,500.

Carroll says he can make a pair of boots in a day and does so often.

"I try to build my business on service," the 51-year-old bootmaker says.

Among his customers are country-western singers Larry Gatlin, Dwight Yoakum, Lynn Anderson and Willie Nelson.
