Tech chooses Lawless as president

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech University's selection Thursday of Robert W. Lawless as its new president brings a blend of management and academic experience to the school, faculty and regents said.

The school's nine-member board of regents voted unanimously to accept Lawless, 52, executive vice president and chief operations officer of Southwest Airlines, to succeed former President Lauro Cavazos, who stepped down from the 24,000-student school in August to become Secretary of Education.

Lawless' teaching experience at Houston and Texas A&M, where he earned a doctorate in operations research, gives faculty confidence that the new president will understand the faculty's point of view, Texas Tech faculty senate president Michael Stoune, a music professor, said.

"He understands the university from both sides," Stoune said.

Regents chairman J. Fred Bucy said, "In Robert Lawless we have found an outstanding individual with the talent and vision to lead our institutions into a period of great progress. We feel very fortunate to be able to name as our new president one of the most dynamic corporate executives in the nation, who is also one of the most distinguished academicians."

Lawless, who did not immediately return a phone call to the Associated Press Thursday, will visit the Lubbock campus Monday for a new conference and welcoming reception, Bucy said.

Two El Paso teens attend school with TB

EL PASO (AP) — Health officials and doctors say they'll be more vigilant about tuberculosis after two El Paso teen-agers were found to have attended school for months while they were infectious with the disease.

Because the disease is uncommon in the United States, doctors frequently mistake it for less-serious illnesses such as the flu, said Dr. Stuart Polly, director of internal medicine at El Paso's Thomason Hospital and a professor at Texas Tech University School of Medicine.

But tuberculosis is more common in El Paso than in most of the United States because of its endemic poverty and proximity to Ciudad Juarez, Mexico, a city of 1.1 million where tuberculosis is more widespread.

There were 99 reported cases of tuberculosis in El Paso in 1988, up sharply from the 37 cases reported in 1987. Incidents of people who tested positive to exposure to the bacterium that causes tuberculosis was up, too — from 715 in 1987 to 1,100 in 1988.

The numbers this year threaten to match last year's, said Dr. Laurance Nickey, director of the El Paso City-County Health District.

On Wednesday, more than 1,000 students, faculty and staff members at Guillen Intermediate School were tested for exposure to tuberculosis after it was discovered a student had been attending the school for four months while she had the disease.

Similar screenings are scheduled next week at J. Harold Wiggs Middle School, where another student was diagnosed with tuberculosis after months of attending classes while infectious.

About 10 percent of the students are expected to test positive for exposure to tuberculosis and will undergo preventive treatment, said Dr. Miguel Escobedo, a health district tuberculosis control officer.

Nickey said doctors apparently mistook the students' symptoms for other diseases such as flu.

Police look for suspects in sexual assault case

A female was robbed and sexually assaulted in her home in the 500 block of Highway 30 in College Station March 6 at noon.

The suspects knocked at the door and, when no one answered, forced their way into the house.

The female resident, who was home alone, responded to noises and surprised the suspects ransacking her home.

One of the suspects grabbed the victim, tied her up, and sexually assaulted her while the other suspect looked for items to steal.

Both suspects fled the scene with the victim's purse and some jewelry.

The suspects are described as two black males, approximately 6 feet tall, one weighing 160-170 pounds, the other weighing 180-200 pounds, and both wearing scarves to conceal their identities.

If you have any information regarding this crime, please contact Crime Stoppers at 775-TIPS.

When called, Crime Stoppers will assign a code number to protect the caller's identity. If the call leads to an arrest and grand jury indictment, Crime Stoppers will pay the caller up to $1,000.

Crime Stoppers also pays cash for information regarding any felony crime or the whereabouts of any wanted fugitive.

A&M hosts regional engineering conference

The annual Gulf Coast region's Society of Women Engineers conference will be hosted by its Texas A&M chapter this weekend.

This year's joint professional and student conference, titled "Women in Engineering: The Challenge for Tomorrow," will be held at Kleberg Animal and Food Sciences Center and the College Station Ramada Inn.

Activities will include plant tours of A&M's ocean drilling program, nuclear science center and agricultural engineering program and various speakers, Society of Women Engineers member Lee Ann Drake said.

Speakers' topics will include the importance of community involvement in engineering, technical societies and engineering ethics, Drake said.
