Man blames agency for not curing son of mental problem

AUSTIN (AP) — The parents of John Lelsz Jr., the plaintiff in a 15-year-old class action suit for better treatment of the state's mentally retarded, remained hospitalized in Galveston Thursday after their son attacked them, nearly biting off his mother's finger.
But the father of the severely retarded, blind man blames attack on the Texas Department of Mental Health and Mental Retardation, saying the agency has failed to provide proper services to cure their son's violent behavior.
State officials, however, say they have done all the Lelsz family has allowed them to do for their son.
John Lelsz Sr., 65, said he and his wife, Ruth, 59, had picked up their son from the Richmond State School in Austin and drove him home to Galveston for the week while authorities refurbished his ward in preparation for a federal inspection.
But when the Lelszes tried to take their son to the grocery store Saturday night, he began hitting and biting the couple.
"He just freaked out," the elder Lelsz, who was driving, said. "He wouldn't believe that we weren't taking him back to that place. He kept begging. He said, 'Stay at home, stay at home.' He was flailing his arms and waving. He was completely berserk."

Lelsz Jr. bit his father's arm and hand multiple times, causing him to lose control of the car. He also bit his mother's shoulder, arms, hands, and finger so severely that she has had surgery twice since Saturday.
A nurse who asked not to be identified told the Associated Press the couple are recovering from their injuries at John Sealy Hospital, but probably will remain there about a week.
"Both are doing fine, but they've got some infections and all," the nurse said, adding doctors had determined they would not have to amputate Mrs. Lelsz' left pinkie as originally believed.

The elder Lelsz suffered severe bites on two fingers and his arm, while Mrs. Lelsz had a large gash on the back of her hand, bites on her left arm and shoulder and many bruises, the nurse said.
"Every bit of this was avoidable," Lelsz Sr. told the Austin American-Statesman Wednesday. "They state officials have ignored our pleas. They have ignored the court order to get started with appropriate programs for everyone."

John Lelsz Jr. became the lead plaintiff of a 1974 class-action suit seeking state reforms for the care of the mentally retarded.

But Jaylon Fincannon, deputy MHMR commissioner for retardation services, said, "To say that this incident or many other (biting) incidents that have occurred was avoidable is not quite accurate."
"It's almost impossible to know if there was something we could have done that would have eliminated John's aggressive behavior and that, therefore, this incident wouldn't have occurred. We have done literally hundreds of things with John in an attempt to curb his aggressive behavior."

"He's gotten more services than anyone else has," said Pat Craig, an MHMR assistant deputy commissioner. "If anything, we've been discriminatory" toward Lelsz Jr., he said, because his case is difficult and he is the named plaintiff in the class-action suit.

Settlement agreements in the 15-year federal court case don't include provisions written specifically for Lelsz Jr. Rather, court orders issued by U.S. District Judge Barend Sanders of Dallas require improved services for all retarded people.

Restaurant Report

By Mia B. Moody REPORTER

The restaurants listed below were inspected by the Brazos County Health Department March 15-16. Information is taken from a food-service establishment inspection report.
SCORED BETWEEN 90 AND 95:

Wings N Things at 1045 Texas Ave. was inspected by David Plett. Score — 93. Five points were deducted because food wasn't stored at the correct temperature. Two points were deducted because some food was improperly thawed. Two points were deducted because food wasn't protected correctly during storage. One point was deducted because single-service articles weren't stored properly.

Shipley's Donuts at 210 Villa Maria was inspected by Eddie Bolch. Score — 84. Five points were deducted because toxic items were stored incorrectly. Four two-point violations were cited because food was stored incorrectly, food-contact surfaces of equipment weren't clean, trashcans weren't covered and soap was missing from a restroom. Points were deducted in other minor areas.

David Jefferson, a registered sanitarian at the department, says restaurants with scores of 95 or above generally have excellent operations and facilities. He says restaurants with scores in the 70s or low 80s usually have serious violations in the health report.

Scores can be misleading, Jefferson says, because restaurants can get the same score by having several minor violations or a few major violations. He says the minor violations can be corrected during the inspection. Point deductions or violations in the report range from one point (minor violations) to five points (major violations).

Jefferson says the department might close a restaurant if the score is below 60, the personnel have infectious diseases, the restaurant lacks adequate refrigeration, there is a sewage backup in the building or the restaurant has a complete lack of sanitization for the food equipment.

The department inspects each restaurant every six months. Jefferson says a follow-up inspection is sometimes required if a restaurant has a four- or five-point violation that cannot be corrected during the inspection, or if there are numerous small violations.

Inspectors at the department are registered sanitarians.
