Off-duty policeman shot by fellow officer in domestic incident

DUNCANVILLE (AP)—Police in this Dallas suburb shot and killed an off-duty Dallas police officer who had argued with his wife and brandished a gun as he tried to enter his home early Sunday, authorities said.
Dallas Police Sgt. Larry Wise, 39, died at Charlton Methodist Hospital at 4:05 a.m., about 50 minutes after being shot once in the chest by a Duncannville officer who had been asked to be present when a relative picked up Wise's 13-year-old son and a friend.
Brenda Smith, Wise's sister-in-law, stopped at the Duncannville police station early Sunday to ask for accompaniment when she picked up the teen-agers.
Smith told police Wise had made threats while he and his wife, Cindy, were out celebrating Mrs. Wise's birthday Saturday night, said Duncannville police spokesman Dan Robertson.
Duncannville Sgt. Glenn Repp III and officer Stacy Holden arrived at the Wise home just before he did, Robertson said. Wise spotted the officers and pointed his gun at them, but then lowered it and moved toward the front door of the house, the spokesman said.
The officers, who had sought cover behind their car when Wise raised his gun, began to approach him. Standing about 20 feet apart, Repp and Wise fired their weapons, but Robertson said police weren't sure who fired first.
However, Dallas police spokesman Hollis Edwards said he was informed by Duncannville police that Wise fired the first shot, and that Repp had returned fire in self-defense.
The Duncannville officers were not injured.
Repp and Wise knew each other on a "professional basis," Robertson said, adding Repp repeatedly ordered Wise to "Drop it, Larry."
Duncannville police will also be helped in their investigation by an officer who is Wise's brother, but police refused to identify him.
Wise was assigned to the Southwest Substation, where his supervisor, Lt. Kenneth Seguin, said he let a sector of 10 patrol officers.
"It's hard on the officers," Seguin said. "They lost a very good supervisor. He took good care of his people."
Calling Wise an "overgrown teddy bear," Seguin said the 20-year veteran was assigned to lead a special car-theft task force last year.
"When I got the call at 4:30 this morning, it was just disbelief," Seguin said.
Wise's father and grandfather recently died, and his grandmother is recovering in a hospital from a stroke, Wise's friend Steve Smith said.

Hands

She said this year's success guarantees that the event will continue.
"It is a good way for the campus and the community to get together for a good cause," she said.
"They do not come together enough, and this is something we need to do more of."
She said the community is one of the University's most valuable resources.
"The more supportive we are of the community and events like this, the more successful future events will be," Keilberg said.
She said that to generate an even greater turnout in the future, she would like to see the event moved to the fall semester on a football weekend.

Cancer

Americans consume about 40 percent of total calories as fat. A decrease to 30 percent is suggested.
• Eat more high-fiber foods.
Regular consumption of whole grains, fruits and vegetables is recommended.
Studies suggest that diets high in fiber may help to reduce the risk of colon cancer.
"High fiber foods make you feel fuller for a longer period of time," Skaggs said. "It helps with decreasing calories."
• Include foods rich in vitamins A and C in the daily diet.
Choose dark green and deep yellow fresh vegetables and fruits as sources of vitamin A, such as carrots, spinach, sweet potatoes, peaches and apricots.
Sources of vitamin C include oranges, grapefruit, strawberries and green and red peppers.
"Vitamin C can inhibit the formation of carcinogenic nitrosamines (cancer producing agents) in the stomach," she said.
• Include cruciferous vegetables in the diet.
These include cabbage, broccoli, brussels sprouts and cauliflower.
Tests in laboratory animals revealed that cruciferous vegetables in the diet may be highly effective in the prevention of chemically induced cancer.
• Be moderate in consuming salted, smoked and nitrite-cured foods.
Conventionally smoked foods such as hams and some varieties of sausage and fish absorb tars that arise from incomplete combustion.
Tars contain numerous carcinogens chemically similar to the carcinogenic tars in tobacco smoke. This has prompted the food industry to start using a "liquid smoke" thought to be less hazardous.

Cancer is higher in areas of the world where salt-cured and smoked foods are eaten frequently.
Nitrite is used in meat preservation and acts as a preventive against food poisoning along with improving the color and flavor of meats.
In parts of the world where nitrates and nitrites are prevalent in food and water, or where cured and pickled foods are common in the diet, stomach and esophageal cancers are common.
Evidence exists that nitrate and nitrite can enhance nitrosamine formation, both in foods and in the digestive tract.
The U.S. Department of Agriculture and the American meat industry have substantially decreased the amount of nitrite in prepared meats and are searching for improved methods of meat preservation.
• Drink alcohol in moderation.
Heavy drinkers of alcohol, especially those who are smokers, are at unusually high risk for cancers of the oral cavity, larynx and esophagus.
Alcohol abuse can result in cirrhosis, which may lead to liver cancer.
In a recent Battalion article, however, it was reported that a study showed red wine contains a powerful anti-cancer agent called quercetin.
Research revealed that certain molecules in red grape skins released during a processing technique affect the amount of quercetin in red wine.
The article said quercetin would completely block the action of a whole series of carcinogens.
Cancer cells develop from an initiation phase to a promotion phase, in which they proliferate over time into a cancerous mass. The article said quercetin has been found to act on cells in the promotion stage.
There is no indication, however, that people should drink an abundance of red wine hoping to fight off cancer, the article said.
