Track owner gets perm despite drug conviction

AUSTIN (AP) — Although track owner Frances Carr failed to disclose a drug possession conviction on the license application, the Texas Racing Commission has granted a pari-mu-tuel permit for Manor Downs near

The commission's 5-0 vote on Wednesday followed two days of hearings, much of which centered on Carr's failure to disclose on the application that she had been convicted in 1970 for possession of marijuana in the Bahamas.

"If we wanted to deny the license, there are ample grounds to do so," Commissioner Ruben Cardenas said. "But we have the strongest commitment on finances we have seen so far. They didn't ask for any exemptions, they have experienced management on board, and they have a proven track record."
"We have to weigh that against
