Post office hiring policies questioned by U.S. Rep. Leland

DALLAS (AP) — A Texas congressman has asked for a review of hiring practices at the Dallas post office.

U.S. Rep. Mickey Leland, the Houston Democrat who leads the House subcommittee on postal operations and services, said he is concerned too few Hispanics are working in the Dallas division of the U.S. Postal Service.

"I would appreciate your reviewing this matter and contacting me with your findings," Leland wrote in a letter to Postmaster General Anthony Frank.

Ralph Stewart, a spokesman for Frank, said, "We are in the process of responding to the congressman."

While acknowledging that their percentage of Hispanic employees is below that in the available workforce, postal officials defend their affirmative action efforts. And they say the disparity is caused by the small number of Hispanics who apply to post office jobs compared with

Clements sets record for number of vetoes in term

AUSTIN (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements, wrapping up work on bills passed by the 1989 Legislature, has set a new record for vetoing legislation.

Clements vetoed a total of 55 bills from this session for a total of 179 vetoes during his two terms in office — 1979-1983 and 1986 to the present, according to legislative records.

Those vetoes broke the record of 117 by Gov. Dan Moody, who served from 1927 to 1931.

But Clements also signed 1,263 bills from the 1989 Legislature — ranging from requiring that motorcycle riders wear helmets to a record state budget.

Clements ended the bill spree by Sunday night's deadline, vetoing a proposal that would have given debtors more protection on foreclosed property.

The legislation produced a major controversy between bankers and

Soviet doctors' skills impress Texas medic

GALVESTON (AP) — A Texas burn specialist who helped treat victims of a Soviet train disaster said he was awed by the wave of injuries but impressed by the Soviets' reaction to the victims.

"We were extremely impressed with their technical abilities and their compassion and drive in such an adverse circumstance," said Dr. David Herndon, chief of staff at the Shriners Burns Institute and a professor of surgery at the University of Texas Medical Branch at Galveston.

"The facilities in fact were quite good and the physicians were quite good, but the number of patients was quite huge for any one team to be able to undertake."

Herndon said he was surprised to see successful treatment techniques that differed markedly from American procedures.

"We really were impressed with the Soviets' openness, the way they allowed us in and shared ideas without any hesitancy or distrust," he said.

Anglos and blacks.

"I think we do a good job of recruitment," said Primo Marquez, director of human resources in the Dallas division.

Leland became concerned that the division might be hiring Hispanics at a rate below their proportion of the available workforce after U.S. Rep. John Bryant, D-Dallas, produced the agency's hiring statistics.

Of the 10,929 division workers, 758, or 6.9 percent, are Hispanic, according to statistics. But to reach parity with the Dallas County labor force and comply with its own affirmative action plan, the Dallas division would need to employ at least 961 Hispanics, or 8.8 percent of its workforce.

"We have heard of (hiring) complaints in Dallas and of similar complaints in Houston, and that's enough to at least suggest that certainly the postmaster general ought to look into it," Carlton Carl, spokesman for Bryant said.

developers in the closing days of the session that ended May 29.

Real estate interests had sought to make it more difficult for lenders to recover their losses on delinquent loans.

Under current law, the price paid at the foreclosure auction establishes the "fair market value" for the property and the lender can demand payment from the debtor on the outstanding loan balance.

The Legislature passed a compromise plan that would have allowed the lender to foreclose, but the borrower would have had the right to go to court to receive a determination of the property's value and the amount of the outstanding loan balance. The difference in these two prices is called the deficiency.

Clements vetoed the bill saying it would have resulted in numerous lawsuits.

Herndon's six-member team was one of three American groups sent to the Soviet Union by the U.S. State Department after the June 4 explosion involving two passenger trains.

At least 650 people died and 700 others were injured in the explosion, which was caused when a gas line exploded, blasting two nearby trains. The accident occurred in a remote area near Ufa in the Urals region.

Herndon said he was sent to Ufa, where he encountered a large number of burn victims, including 160 children.

Herndon, who also has traveled to Mexico and Panama after various crises and served educational missions in several others, said he got off to a false start when the Soviet government rescinded its request for his original medical team as it was boarding a plane in Washington.

The next day, he said, after he had returned to Galveston, the Soviets placed another request for a team specializing in children's burns.
