Cartoon voice creator Mel Blanc dead at 81

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Mel Blanc, who entranced generations of cartoon viewers with voices ranging from Bugs Bunny and Porky Pig to Barney Rubble and Tweety, died Monday following a lengthy hospital stay. He was 81.

The creator of such classic cartoon trademarks as Bugs Bunny's "Eh, what's up, Doc?" Porky Pig's "Th-th-th-that's all f-f-f-folks" and Road Runner's "Beep, Beep" died at 2:30 p.m. from complications of heart disease and other ailments at Cedars-Sinai Medical Center, hospital spokesman Ron Wise said.

He had been suffering from cardiac problems and emphysema when admitted May 19. Blanc performed the voices on 850 cartoons for Warner Bros. in a career spanning more than 50 years.

His versatility was so profound that few would have presumed just one actor was behind so many markedly different characters.

Working decades before the advent of high-tech sound effects, Blanc was a human synthesizer and a verbal computer. It has been estimated that more than 20 million people hear his voices daily.

Besides Warner Bros., Blanc worked for other animated film makers. Within the industry he was known as "The Man of a Thousand Voices."

Blanc said he once tried to count all the cartoon voices he did, while recuperating in 1961 from a near-fatal car accident. He said he fell asleep shortly after passing the 400 mark.

residence requirement."

The other visa some Chinese students hold is an F-1 visa, which is strictly a student visa, and less common.

Sands said in order to maintain an F-1 visa, the holder has to be a full-time student and, in general, has to support himself.

In efforts to save students from deportation or persecution in China, President Bush announced last week that no students whose visas have expired or are about to expire would be deported until June 5, 1990. This "deferral of enforced departure," or D.E.D., means the immigration service would defer deporting a Chinese national who files.

Sands said this plea just gives students more time to stay in the United States if they've run out of any other possibilities of extending their visas.

So far, Sands said, she knows of only one Chinese national citizen that has taken advantage of the D.E.D.

"Everyone is leery of it because it puts the student in limbo," Sands said. "It puts them in a special status that tells them they can stay and they will be given employment authorization until June 5, 1990 — what happens after that date no one knows yet. No one has said what's going to happen — if they'll be able to stay or told to leave."

Sands said students will not have as hard a time trying to stay in the United States as researchers and faculty members.

"Students can keep reapplying while they're continuing their study-status," she said.

Curriculum

from 1860 to Present. (3-0)

- Liberal Arts 203, Foundations of the Liberal Arts: Humanities. (3-0)

- Liberal Arts 204, Foundations of the Liberal Arts: Social Sciences. (3-0)

- Liberal Arts 381, Junior Seminar: Interdisciplinary Honors Seminar. (3-0)

Added to the university core curriculum in the Computer Usage and Cultural Heritage categories include:

- Agriculture 201 (cross-listed with Renewable Natural Resources 201), Computer Applications in Agriculture. (3-0)

- Business Analysis 217, Business Data Processing Concepts. (3-0)
- Geography 322, The Geography of Britain. (3-0)

These courses must be approved by Pres. William Mobley and the Board of Regents before being enacted.

In other action, the Senate approved a motion made by Dr. Mark Busby during Committee of the Whole for the Faculty Senate Executive Committee to investigate how buildings on campus are named.

Committee of the Whole is an informal discussion where the entire Senate forms one committee to make suggestions, ask questions or express concerns.

Also during Committee of the Whole, Dr. Carl Gabbard expressed his disappointment in the system that labels certain faculty members as lecturers. Even after many of them receive academic and research awards, he said, they lack job security.
