Bond

As you can probably tell by the storyline, "Licence To Kill" is an extremely action-packed movie. But what would any Bond film be without some gratuitous sex? This comes in the form of Pam Bouvier, played by Cary Lowell, and Lupe Lamora, played by Talisa Soto. Granted, these are both extremely beautiful women, but their characters are one-dimensional and do little more than clutter up the storyline. "Licence To Kill" would have been a much better film if these characters had been developed more.

I have a feeling that since the creative team behind "Licence To Kill" was trying to be faithful to the original Fleming novels, they attempted to shy away from standard Bond movie cliches. Unfortunately, because audiences have come to expect certain things from a Bond movie, the creative team had to at least include a few of them. Consequently, the seduction scenes happen quickly and for no apparent reason.

For example, after shooting up a bar and then escaping in a boat, Pam Bouvier suddenly gets all hot and bothered. Considering that she had known Bond barely 10 minutes at this point, her actions don't make a whole lot of sense. Fortunately, this scene is over with before you can blink.

Similarly, the seduction scenes with Lupe Lamora are just as stupid and are a definite low point in the film.

Another Bond movie cliché that happens for no apparent reason are the wise-cracks.

Fleming's Bond, as I mentioned earlier, was deadly serious about all things and hated killing anyone, even if he had justification. At no time would Bond kill a person and then make a joke about it. His reaction would be more along the lines of getting somber or angry.

The James Bond of the films, however, wise-cracks about everything from killing people to seducing women. Strangely enough, this aspect seems to have come from a series of books concerning an adventurer named The Saint.

Written by Leslie Charteris, The Saint was a English man who traveled the world, righting wrongs and killing bad guys. He wore the finest clothes, ate the finest food, and drank the finest wine. He also wise-cracked a lot. Sound familiar?

In "Licence To Kill," Bond still wise-cracks, but not very often or very enthusiastically.

For the most part, "Licence To Kill" is a good Bond film. It is more realistic (except for an 18-wheeler doing a wheelie) and very violent. Bond fans will be pleased, especially fans of the Fleming novels.

IN ADVANCE

KANM Benefit at Brazos Landing Saturday

The very last live music performance at Brazos Landing will be the KANM Benefit, which will be held Saturday night at 10 at Brazos Landing (Northgate at 103 Boyett St.)

Performing at the event will be local bands For Cryin' Out Loud and Butter Both Sides and Dallas band International Thief Thief. Proceeds raised at the benefit will go towards KANM-FM,

A&M's student radio station. Money raised will be used for operational purposes, as well as for buying new equipment and expanding the station's music library.

Cover for the concert is $3 for persons 21 or older, and $4 for minors. Anyone wearing a KANM t-shirt will receive $1 off admission.

Aggie Players premier new 'Odd Couple'

The TAMU Aggie Players will open their production of Neil Simon's new version of his classic play "The Odd Couple" Thursday night at 8 in Rudder Forum.

In the new version of the play, Simon has changed the principal characters, Felix Ungar and Oscar Madison, to women — Florence and Olive. And instead of the poker party that opens the original version, the new play begins with a Trivial Pursuit party hosted by Ms. Madison.

Heading the cast are Ann Caton as Olive Madison and Anne Streigler as Florence Ungar. Both Caton and Streigler, as well as the remainder of the cast are high school students.

Additional performances of the play will be presented Friday and Saturday nights at 8.

Tickets for the event are $3 and can be purchased in the MSB Box Office in Rudder Tower.

Free rock concert in Central Park Saturday

The College Station Parks and Recreation Department will sponsor its third free concert of the summer this Saturday at 8 p.m. in Central Park.

San Antonio's Michael Michael and the Max will be the featured performers. The group will perform Top 40, dance and rock music.

A dance floor will be provided for those wishing to dance.

Those interested in attending are encouraged to bring lawn chairs or blankets and insect repellent, as the concert will be held outside.

Central Park is located at 100 Krenektpark Road.

ROAD TRIPS

Ringling Bros. arrives in Houston Tuesday

The 118th edition of the Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus arrives in Houston Tuesday, promising an all-new lineup of spectacles designed to thrill all age groups.

The first performance will begin Tuesday night at 7:30 at the Summit. Shows will be held daily through July 30.

At 9:30 a.m. Tuesday, the festivities begin with the Grand Animal Walk. After arriving by train, the circus' animals and performers will march to the Summit.

The exact route the parade will take is as follows: Down Westpark to Edloe Street, across the Edloe overpass of Hwy. 59 and down Norfolk Street to the Summit.

Headlining this year's African-influenced edition is Tahar, the Moroccan Master, who commands a deadly assemblage of alligators in a never-before-seen Ringling Bros. and Barnum & Bailey Circus attraction.

Continuing the African theme will be African lion tamer Larry Allen Dean and Carmen Hall, the only woman ever to handle full-grown male African baboons.

Also, sixteen dancers will perform a traditional Zulu warrior war dance, never before seen outside the African continent, while wearing authentic Zulu head-dresses.

Tickets for the event are now on sale at the Summit Box Office and at all Rainbow Ticketmaster and Ticketron locations, including Foley's and Dillard's. Ticket prices are $17.50, $10.50, $9.50 and $7.50. Those interested in charging tickets may call 1-800-284-5780.

For more information, call the Summit information line at (713) 961-9003.
