Racing Commission denies licenses to Houston groups

Pari-mutuel betting remains stuck at the gate

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Racing Commission voted unanimously Sunday to deny licenses for Class 1 horse race tracks sought by two Houston groups, leaving big-time pari-mutuel wagering stuck in the starting gate for at least three months.

After three days of hearings, the five commissioners rejected licenses for Houston Downs and the Houston Turf Club, citing problems with both applicants' financial proposals and design ideas.

"I don't feel that Class 1 racing in Texas should come without the utmost in security," Commissioner Glenn Blodgett said.

The commission could reopen the application process for a Class 1 license in the Houston area. Assistant Attorney General Bill Conover, who participated in the hearings on behalf of the commission, said the earliest that could be done would be January 1990.

The Houston groups can appeal the denial within 20 days.

Houston Turf Club President Kirwin Drouot said he did not immediately know whether his group would appeal. Houston Downs representatives left immediately after the announcement.

"We're disappointed," Larry Stephenson, a principal investor in the Houston Turf Club, said. "We wish we would have had a little more insight as to what their expectations were."

Susan Baitie, chief veterinarian for the racing commission, questioned the design of the Houston Turf Club's barn facilities. She said space constraints made it too dangerous for the horses and the handlers.

TO BUILD A SOLID FUTURE

It might seem far-fetched to you to suggest that common, everyday garbage could be the foundation of an exciting career filled with personal growth and professional development. If so, you need to talk with Browning-Ferris Industries.

Consider these facts:

- BFI, founded in 1969, has grown into a world leader in the waste services industry with current revenues of over $2.5 billion and an impressive 20% annual rate of growth since 1983.
- BFI is also engaged in such environmentally-conscious activities as recycling, waste-to-energy conversion and asbestos abatement.
- BFI is seeking a select few interested in making significant contributions to our environment while building a satisfying, rewarding career.
