School's hair-length rule called discriminatory by boys' father

HOUSTON (AP) — The father of two long-haired boys, in a suit filed Tuesday, charged a school district with sexual discrimination and civil rights violations because of its hair-length rule for male students.

"I feel all citizen rights are important and that I in some way can make my contribution to see that all people are protected by the Constitution," said Dub Wilkinson, whose sons have missed school for nearly a year because of the rule.

The suit, filed on behalf of his sons, Brian, 17, and Travis, 15, seeks an injunction to block the Spring Branch Independent School District and top district officials from enforcing the rule and award unspecified damages to Wilkinson for frivolous prosecution against him.

The boys have been barred from school since November 1988 for refusing to cut their hair, which falls below their shoulders. School rules allow no hair past shoulder-length.

Their father was fined $25 under a state law which requires school attendance and a hearing to challenge that fine was set for Tuesday before Harris County Criminal Court Judge J.R. Musslewhite. That hearing was delayed for two weeks, however, in light of the new suit.

"It's my understanding that the law and these kinds of claims were addressed in the early and mid 1970s and that the policies were upheld by the appeals courts and the claims challenging them were rejected," said Jeff Davis, an attorney for the school district.

School officials have said in the past it was important for students to learn to live by standards, and the local school board recently voted to uphold the hair rule.

"I refuse to be a blunt instrument for the schools to use to beat my sons over the head, so they use the state prosecuting system to be the blunt instrument because we will not comply with their wishes," Wilkinson said. "Once this is resolved, the books will be there, the teachers will be there, everything will be in place. If they want to avail themselves to the system, it will be there."

On Tuesday, Travis Wilkinson who would be in the 10th grade, said, "It's just our right to have hair that long."

He and his brother have been studying at home, reading books and taking practice quizzes.

"We're getting a good education," Brian Wilkinson, an 11th-grader, said. "This is real-life stuff here. This is something you can't get sitting in a class at school."

The Wilkinsons' attorney, Darrell K. McAlexander, said both sides were studying the case to determine the best way to resolve the matter.

"This is a sexually discriminatory policy in violation of the Texas Constitution and U.S. Constitution," he said. "The problem with the policy is they are making a policy that is gender exclusive — they're making it against little boys but not against little girls."

"There is no way that can be maintained other than as a cultural bias, a sexual bias. They are denying these young men an education unless they comply with a gender exclusive rule."

McAlexander said besides the $25 fine, Wilkinson could face up to a $100 per day fine for each day his child remains home.

Planting

"We have earmarked areas adjacent to the different colleges and residence halls," Ray said.

"For instance, there are 28 live oaks near Kleberg that represent the College of Agriculture."

The tree-naming program will include the placement of memorial plaques and benches near selected trees and planted areas, he said.

The entry level for a potential tree owner is $1,000.

"At this first level the donors have two options," Ray said. "They can have a new tree planted with a memorial plaque, or they can place the same plaque on an existing tree and have a memorial bench built nearby."

The next level of giving is $2,500 for a 100-square-foot area that includes a memorial tree, bench and surrounding brick, he said.

Levels ranging from $21,000 to $125,000 have been set for endowments to maintain several flower beds and annual color areas, such as the main entrance to campus and surrounding the University Center Complex, he said.

"The donations will be used to cover the actual outlay, and hopefully there will be a little left over to go towards tree care," Ray said.

"If a donor wishes to plant a new tree instead of using an existing one, we will provide a 3- to 4-inch caliber tree, normally a live oak or a water oak," he said.

If someone requests a certain kind of tree it must be carefully considered.

"We would have to take a look at the tree because the soil and water here make us a little bit restrictive," he said.

The tree-naming program will provide a means for donations to be made to Texas A&M at a smaller price range.

"It fills a niche for people who can't afford big donations but want to contribute to their school," Ray said.

"I've been associated with two or three other schools and I have never seen an alumni quite like this one. They are generally quite generous."

The tree-naming program is the result of a campus committee which included Ray, Vice President for Development Robert Walker, Associate Provost Jerry Gaston, and Associate Vice President for Student Services Malon Sutherland.

For more information concerning the tree-naming program, contact the Development Foundation.

Mattox

misled his campaign staff to gain access to confidential documents. According to Mattox, Hernandez came into his downtown campaign headquarters on three occasions and claimed to be a Mattox supporter.

Hernandez later was seen working at a campaign table for Richards at the Mexican-American Democrats convention, Mattox said.

Hernandez said he went by the Mattox campaign headquarters twice, once at the invitation of a Mat-tox campaign worker, because "I was just a curious person."

In his statement Tuesday, Mattox criticized Richards and accused her of losing control of her campaign staff.

"Ann is missing in action. So the question remains: How much did Ann know, and when did she know it? She has abandoned her campaign to a staff in total disarray," Mattox said.

"While she's been off trying to raise money in Hollywood, San Francisco and New York, her campaign staff has run amok," he said.

Richards' responded with some jabs of her own. She noted that Mattox hasn't yet formally declared himself a candidate for governor, although he's been raising money for such a bid for more than a year.

"To my knowledge, I don't even have an opponent in this race," she said.

"We've committed to the people of Texas we would conduct this campaign on the very highest possible plane, and we intend to do that. I don't intend to engage in that kind of ridiculous dialogue (with Mattox)," Richards said.
