would cut long-range strategic arms by 30 to 50 percent.

Taking on domestic critics Sunday, Baker said, "There was a lot of criticisms in advance of this ministerial (meeting) that I hope is absolutely gone now because we have made some really fundamental progress."

The most influential critic, Senator Majority Leader George Mitchell, tempered his remarks somewhat on another interview program, but did not recant his position.

"The events of the last 24 hours are certainly positive . . . but I still think there are a number of steps that should be taken, should have been taken previously," the Maine

Democrat said on ABC's "This Week With David Brinkley."

He specifically mentioned the Democratic call for more financial aid to Poland and expanded trade with the Soviet Union as areas needing more attention.

Baker also urged Congress to approve Bush's full budget request for Star Wars development.

"We still (are) every bit as committed to the Strategic Defense Initiative as we were before," he said. "Of course if the Congress says, 'You can't move forward,' then we will be constrained from moving forward. And yes, they are making a heavy run at the budget of S.D.I., much against the wishes of the Bush administration."

mained without power. Sections of Charleston County may be groping without lights and refrigerators for a month or more.

In Charlotte, N.C., which is 200 miles inland, 150,000 of the 375,000 residents were without power and some could be without electricity for two weeks.

North Carolina Gov. Jim Martin has asked for a federal disaster declaration. The National Guard was sent to Charlotte on Saturday to help the police.

In Charleston, a prayer service was held at St. Philip's Episcopal Church, a 17th-century church that lost a door and a copper roof.

"If Hurricane Hugo has taught us anything, let it teach us humility, how much we know our need for God," said the Rev. James E. Hampton, whose choir read hymns by candlelight and sang with a piano because the electric organ was useless.

Fifty churches in the Columbia area asked congregants to make donations for the hurricane victims.

"The congregation has been asked to bring in clothes, brooms, cleaning supplies, bottled water, bedding — any household items that are transportable," said LeGrand Cooper, administrator at the First Presbyterian Church in Columbia.

About 200 volunteers formed a human chain to get goods donated Sunday into the Carolina Coliseum in Columbia. Within five hours, a 10,000-square-foot room with 12-foot high ceilings was packed with goods for coastal communities, church officials said.

More than half the homes on the Isle of Palms, a barrier island that took the brunt of the killer storm, were structurally unsafe and many stood on just one or two stilts. Propane gas leaked and power lines, trees and debris cluttered roads.

Because police drove their cruisers to the mainland before Hugo struck, the 15-member police department patrolled in garbage trucks, on golf carts and on bicycles.

The Army's 82nd Airborne Division was scheduled to fly personnel carriers onto ravaged Isle of Palms, but the Navy planned to send heavy equipment and the 82nd's — members of its Civil Engineer Corps.

Judo Team Competes in First Tournament of the Season

The Texas A&M Judo Team opened their fall season with a disappointing showing at the National Ladder Judo Tournament this past weekend in Houston. About 150 competitors from across the nation attended this tournament including members of the National Judo Institute of Colorado Springs and members of the San Jose State Team, the collegiate national champions.

Representing the Aggies were Bob Perez in the 143 lbs division.

Darryl Coleman and Kevin Brewer in the 156 lbs class, David Baker and David Schmidt in the 189 lbs division, John Hughes in the 209 lbs division and finally Mike Baker in the 209 lbs and over division. The only Aggies to advance out of the preliminary rounds were David Schmidt and David Baker. Both were eliminated in the next round.

If you are interested in becoming a member of the Club, call Bob Perez at 693-1891.

Why do YOU participate in Intramural Sports?

Brad Lembcke participates in football and softball. He is a senior biochem major. "I enjoy the competition and the time I get to spend with my friends."

Matt Vorst, a sophomore psychology major, likes to play basketball and volleyball. "It's a good way to get exercise, release stress, stay in shape and keep in touch with friends. Besides, it takes up all the time I used to put into sports in high school."
