mmates, but, being a captain, you have to let the players know when they're not doing their jobs," Van

Yvonne Van Brandt

Brandt said. "It can be tough to balance both needs."

However, she said that she gets along well with the players. "Having Kelli Kellen as my co-captain really helps," Van Brandt said.

It is that chemistry that has made the Lady Aggies gel as a playing unit, winning their last three matches of the season.

"In the 14 years that I've been coaching women's volleyball, this team is by far the most cohesive," Givens said. "Yvonne is the glue that holds this team together because of her position and skills."

Van Brandt, who celebrated her twenty-first birthday on Monday, attributes some of her patience to coaching a women's team this summer.

Van Brandt coached a group of high school seniors in a national tournament this summer.

"I think (coaching) helped me see things from a different angle," she said. "Now I have a better feeling for what coach Givens sees. Playing all of the positions that I've played in my career makes it easier to understand how the other players think."

Van Brandt has been a starter since her sophomore season and played most of her freshman year, sharing a spot in the backcourt with Kellen. Earlier this season Givens shifted Van Brandt from setter to outside attacker.

Although the move partially was made to give other players some practice at the setter spot, Givens said Van Brandt hit and blocked well.

"I liked getting the chance to attack," Van Brandt said. "It's fun to swing away."

Givens moved her back into the setting role last week, and he wants her there the rest of the season.

"She does so many things well, but we need her most in the setter's spot," he said.

year passing, averaging over 200 yards per game, the Eagles have lost their last three games to Mississippi State, Auburn and TCU.

USM coach Curley Hallman, a former assistant coach at A&M, is happy with Favre's performance.

"He's playing well," Hallman said. "Brett has made a mistake here and there, but he's running for his life and still having a good year. With the pressure he's getting from pass rushes, it's amazing that he's anywhere near those numbers."

"Our injuries, lack of depth, and the quality of our opponents have mismatched our line most of the time this year. Because of the mismatch, the pressure has fallen on Brett."

But Favre is not happy with his performance.

"I've played pretty well this season, but not well enough to win," Favre said. "No matter how well you play, if you don't win, nobody cares."

A&M coach R.C. Slocum has a slightly different view of Favre.

There aren't many teams we'll play that will have a quarterback better than this guy," Slocum said. "He played very well against us as a true freshman two years ago. He's got quite a bit of experience under his belt since then."

Favre completed 20 of his 36 passes against TCU, but said the loss was upsetting.

"Completing 20 of 36 was good, but we didn't win," Favre said.

With the Eagles trailing, they had the ball on the TCU one-yard line. However, Favre's pass was intercepted and TCU went on to win.

Astros' Reynolds retires

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Astros infielder Craig Reynolds, an All-Star selection in both the American and National Leagues, announced his retirement Wednesday.

Reynolds, 36, played for the Astros 11 seasons, participating in two Western Division titles.

He was an American League All-Star with Seattle in 1978 before coming to the Astros the following season and earning a National League All-Star spot.

"I thought pretty seriously about it at the end of last season," Reynolds said. "Had the club not shown a real interest in wanting me back, I would have seriously considered retiring then."

Reynolds was hitting .203 prior to Wednesday night's game against Atlanta.

"I'm not leaving the game feeling like anybody owes me anything," Reynolds said. "I think it's just the opposite. If anybody owes anything it's me to say thanks to the organization, the city, and people that supported us."

Reynolds is a Houston native and former Houston Reagan High School star.

Tarpley gets starting nod as Mavs' forward

DALLAS (AP) — Roy Tarpley, the most valuable sixth man in the NBA two years ago, has been elevated to a starting power forward position by Dallas Mavericks' coach John MacLeod.

Sam Perkins, who is currently negotiating a new contract with the Mavs, will be coming off the bench in Tarpley's old role.

Tarpley missed 63 of Dallas' 82 regular season games last year because of knee surgery and a drug-related suspension. In his last five games after he was reinstated, Tarpley averaged 24 points and 13 rebounds.

"Roy is ready to start playing full-time now," said MacLeod. "He has earned it."

The Mavs open training camp Oct. 6.

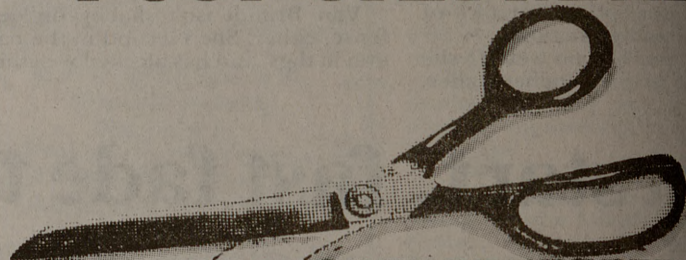

Kevin Sullivan, Mavs' public relations director, said MacLeod decided to make the announcement before training camp so the players would know their roles going into the season.

If center James Donaldson hasn't recovered from major knee surgery, then Tarpley will play defensive center and move to power forward on offense.
