Trial opens for Oklahoma lawmen

Prosecutors accuse sheriff, officer of scheming to torture suspect

SHERMAN (AP) — The trial for two southern Oklahoma lawmen accused in an alleged scheme to kidnap and torture a suspected drug dealer is scheduled to begin Tuesday in federal court.

Prosecutors believe the trial will take one week but defense attorneys say they expect the trial to last two weeks.

A grand jury indicted Love County Sheriff Wesley Liddell Jr. and his son-in-law, Marietta police officer Roger Ray Hilton, on June 1. They are accused of conspiracy to kidnap and interstate travel to commit a crime of violence.

The men were freed on bond after spending almost a month in jail following their arrest in May.

The FBI alleged the men planned to use a heated curling iron to get information from a man about drug labs operating in southern Oklahoma and north Texas. The plan was not carried out.

The FBI said it used another Marietta officer to obtain nine hours of taped conversations about the alleged plot.

Residents of the community were outraged by the arrests. They rallied together and raised money to pay the men's attorneys. Last week, supporters held a $50-a-plate fund-raising dinner in Ardmore, OK.

Defense attorneys say there's more to this case than a scheme allegedly hatched by two lawmen.

"I think when this case is over, you will be disappointed in our federal agents," said state Sen. Darryl Roberts, D-Ardmore, an attorney for the men. "I feel good about the preparations of the case. I have confidence in the case."

One of the key issues during the case will be the accuracy of transcripts of the taped conversations, Roberts said.

"For instance, when they say 'I don't know, guy,' it says 'I know that guy' — that is a big difference," Roberts said.

U.S. District Judge Paul Brown ruled that at the time the jury requests a transcript, it would be one made by both sides.

The trial is scheduled to begin at 9 a.m. in U.S. District Court for the Eastern District of Texas in Sherman.

Liddell and Hilton were taken to Sherman following their arrest because it was the closest federal magistrate, the FBI said.

Mattox refutes criticism of being insensitive

TYLER (AP) — Attorney General Jim Mattox, reacting to criticism that he didn't respond personally to the school bus crash that killed 21 students last month, said local authorities didn't invite him to the scene.

Mattox went to the Lower Rio Grande Valley in April when U.S. and Mexican authorities discovered a drug cult's mass grave that contained more than a dozen bodies, including that of Texas college student Mark Kilroy. The grave was found outside Matamoros, Mexico, across the border from Brownsville.

An Alton woman says officials have reacted less strongly to the bus accident than to Kilroy's death.

Olga Hernandez says she has collected 5,000 signatures on petitions calling for stricter regulation of open caliche pits like the one in which the Alton school bus plunged Sept. 21.

At a Tyler fund-raiser Sunday, Mattox said he was asked by sheriffs and Kilroy's family to come to Brownsville after the cult victims' bodies were discovered. He said he didn't go to nearby Alton after the bus tragedy because it was not a criminal matter.

"Had I gone down there to help without being asked, I would have been severely criticized for grandstanding," Mattox said. "Even when the Kilroys asked me to come to Matamoros, I was criticized."

"I always presume the local law of-officials are competent enough to handle anything that arises," he said. "It would be arrogant for me to step in before I had been asked to respond."

Mattox is scheduled to announce his candidacy for governor Tuesday in five Texas cities, including Brownsville.

Hernandez said she and other Alton-area residents will take their petition to the state capitol.

"We were planning to take them to Austin and see if we could talk to the governor of Texas," she said. "Since the attorney general has come to offer the families his condolences, we plan to visit him instead."

"Those children died because of politics," she said.

Mattox said he appeared at a fund-raiser in Austin recently to benefit the families of the bus accident victims.

"I guess anytime a high profile figure bears fruit, someone else rocks at you," he said.

Electrician lives through 12-story fall

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — A worker atop a 12-story medical building fell Monday and struck a patient on a second-story atrium balcony before landing in a coffee shop below, officials said.

Troy Livingston and another electrician with Outdoor Lighting Services were working on a sign at Medical Center Tower 1 when Livingston fell at about 1:12 p.m., police Sgt. Pat Kilough said.

Livingston and the other worker had just finished repairing an electric sign.

"The next thing that the other electrician finds is the rope is flying by him and this guy (Livingston) is going through the skylight below," Kilough said.

As he fell through the steel-rimmed skylight, Livingston began tumbling and struck a patient who was waiting at a second-story balcony for X-rays, witnesses said. The electrician then fell two more stories, landed on a table in the building's coffee shop, police said.

"There were some ladies screaming downstairs pretty bad," Oscar Gallegos, a building employee who witnessed the accident, said. "It was chaotic. There were people all over. There were doctors and nurses over."

He was in guarded condition at nearby St. Luke's Episcopal Hospital, said hospital spokesman Walter Baker, who declined to identify the man pending notification of relatives.

Livingston was in critical condition, Baker said.

Rick Garcia, spokesman for Outdoor Lighting Services, said Livingston is in his 20s. He did not know how long he had worked for the small company.
