Bush to attend drug summit

ICA, Peru (AP) — The presidents of Peru, Colombia and Bolivia, where the illegal cocaine trade has its roots, invited President Bush on Tuesday to attend a drug summit within 90 days. He accepted immediately.

In a brief communique at the end of a five-hour meeting on a common anti-drug strategy, the leaders said European leaders also should take part in the summit, to be held in Latin America. They pledged to continue "all-out war" on drug trafficking.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said: "The president will go." He said 90 days was "within the time frame we have been considering. It's reasonable."

In their communique, Presidents Alan Garcia of Peru, Virgilio Barco of Colombia and Jaime Paz Zamora of Bolivia said both the production and consumption of cocaine must be addressed.

The statement appeared to reflect Latin American concern over Bush's emphasis on police and military actions against the trade.

Garcia, Barco and Paz suggested details of the summit be worked out at a meeting Nov. 20 in Santa Cruz, Bolivia, of lower-level officials.

Fitzwater said the United States had no objection to participation by Europeans and security concerns would not stand in the way of a summit. Of a planning meeting Nov. 20 he said, "I'm sure that's fine with us."

Garcia has been promoting inclusion of European nations as active participants in a war against the cocaine traffic. If the United States is successful in slowing the flow of cocaine over its borders, he says, smugglers will shift their focus to Europe.

The Peruvian president read the communique to hundreds of reporters gathered in Ica for the closed-door summit, but did not answer questions.

China

get something done.

"In China it is called going through the back door," he said. "It is a lot easier to get ahead economically by using bribes and personal or family connections."

Alston said one of the main concerns of Tiananmen Square protesters was government control of the black market.

"Protestors weren't successful in trying to get the government to stop black marketing because many of the profiteers are party officials or are related to a party official," Alston said.

Wolken said he saw a change in people's attitudes and now they are more willing to fight for what they believe.

"During my first visit, I noticed that people were afraid to speak against the government," Wolken said. "People are taught to obey their superiors without questioning them, which resulted in lack of confusion on people's part because they were dependent on others to make their decision."

Wolken said during the economic reforms people began to make their own decisions and they began to gain confidence. He said this feeling of confidence brought people from walks of life together to ask for more control of their lives through the Tiananmen Square demonstration.
