Quake

Bay area were trapped in San Francisco as darkness fell. All forms of transport leading to the east were shut down. People were asking police whether certain streets were open, looking at road maps and trying to figure out a way out of the city.

In downtown San Francisco, plaster fell off buildings and windows popped out of highrise windows. Fire engine sirens screamed. At some intersections, motorists got out of their cars and directed traffic.

The quake knocked out phones and power, including electricity at the Associated Press bureau in San Francisco.

CBS said the California Highway Patrol reported a J.C. Penney building in downtown Hollister collapsed and a bridge on Highway 101 in Hollister collapsed.

The quake was felt as far away as Reno, Nev., 225 miles to the northeast; as far north as the Russian River area, 70 miles to the north;

180 miles southeast in Fresno and 120 miles due east in Stockton. All those areas registered reports that they felt the quake "strongly."

It was even felt in some downtown Los Angeles highrises. "We felt it here and it was felt in Century City, too," said Polly Horn, a Los Angeles attorney working in the Biltmore Towers.

At least two smaller aftershocks were felt within 40 minutes of the quake and geologists said many more could be expected.

There were unconfirmed reports that a shopping mall collapsed in San Jose, 50 miles south of San Francisco.

Some people were hit with falling plaster at San Francisco Airport, and only outbound flights were continuing there. The Oakland Airport was shut down.

Televised footage of the bridge connecting Oakland and San Francisco showed that a 30-foot section of the upper deck had collapsed, leaving two cars dangling between the two levels. Reports said most occupants got out of their cars safely.

Richards survives quake unscathed

AUSTIN (AP) — State Treasurer Ann Richards was caught in the earthquake which shook San Francisco Tuesday, but escaped unharmed, according to a statement released from her gubernatorial campaign office.

A violent earthquake rocked Northern California during the rush hour, caving in a section of the San Francisco Bay Bridge and delaying the third game of the World Series for at least a day.

Richards, a Democratic candidate for governor, was walking down a San Francisco street when she saw a large granite building start swaying, according to the press release.

There was panic in the streets, as people came running out of shops and stores, Richards reportedly said.

"All the power went off," Richards said in the statement. "People are out in the streets, and it looks like a huge parade is about to come down the street.

"It's really frightening. I'm glad I live in Texas where this kind of thing doesn't happen regularly."

It was not immediately clear extensive the damage was from the quake, which struck at 5:04 p.m. PDT and registered 6.9 on the Richter scale. It was centered near Hollister, 80 miles southeast of San Francisco in San Benito County.
