Aggie Flashback

The following information was gathered from past issues of The Battalion and reflects activities that occurred during this week in A&M's history.

10 years ago — The Memorial Student Center Council approved the first Miss Texas A&M pageant.

25 years ago — Texas A&M former athletes Joe Routt, Frank G. Anderson, John Kimbrough, Bill Henderson and Joel Hunt were inducted into the first Aggie Hall of Fame.

50 years ago — The Texas A&M Puerto Rico Club was established.

75 years ago — The cost of subscribing to the weekly newspaper The Battalion was $1.25 per year.

Tickets still available for Tenuta show

Tickets still are available for this week's performance by comedienne Judy Tenuta, which will take place in Rudder Auditorium Friday night at 8.

Tenuta's opening act will be Amos Ewing, a comic who is a regular at Esther's comedy club in Austin.

Presale prices are $5; tickets will cost $6 at the door. Tickets are on sale at the MSC Box Office.

Call 845-1234 for more information.

Old TV shows, commercials arrive on video

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Nostalgia videos — taped television shows and even commercials from the 1950s and '60s — have found an ever-growing market since Paramount Home Video introduced "Star Trek" on tape in 1985.

With unit sales for various "Star Trek" episodes on tape approaching 4 million, others in the video business have beamed aboard.

Now almost every kind of old program is on tape, from familiar titles such as "The Honeymooners," "The Lone Ranger" and "I Love Lucy" to cult shows like actor Patrick McGouhan's "The Prisoner."

Outfits like Paramount and CBS-Fox Home Video have access to a wide library of shows.

Paramount is considering the original "Mission Impossible," "The Untouchables," and "Mannix," as well as more recent items like "Mork and Mindy."

CBS is looking at "Batman," "Gunsmoke," "Hawaii Five-O" and "Rawhide."

Army Schorr, the vice president and general manager of Rhino Records, says the much-targeted baby boomers seem to be most willing to part with their money for nostalgia videos.

"They're the people who grew up with the stuff, and it brings back comfortable memories," Schorr said. "Also, if they have very young children, they know its OK to put 'The Lone Ranger' on. They know nobody is going to get killed and the good guys are going to win."

Pet cemetery final resting spot for beloved family animals

XENIA, Ohio (AP) — Lying in a secluded glen cut from a wooded estate are the 400 residents of Foresthaven — cats, dogs, horses and other pets that have been buried but not forgotten.

The park-like pet cemetery is operated by Raymond and Renate Glasscock on their 40-acre spread that is also a wildlife sanctuary.

"More and more pets have become real family members," says Mrs. Glasscock. "We're really a little nutty with our love for animals. But we feel there couldn't have been a better purpose for this property... than giving it to the animals."

Among the animals buried there are a 31-year-old racehorse, a squirrel, a parakeet and a pet skunk named "Stinky." A separate area called "Kitty Corner" is reserved for cats whose owners prefer that the felines be buried some distance from the canines.

Glasscock says there are more than 400 pet cemeteries in the United States. It costs $350 to $450 to bury an average-sized pet at Foresthaven, including headstone and use of the chapel. A casket, air- and watertight and in a range of sizes, costs $45 to $200 extra.

The Glasscocks started the cemetery near Xenia in 1981 after their beloved boxer died and they buried on their property. That was quickly followed by the burial of a dog owned by one of their friends. From there, word of the cemetery spread.

Glasscock says that in addition to providing burial, Foresthaven tries to provide understanding and grief counseling for pet owners. "I allow them to talk as much as they want to about their pet," he says, "and supply them with whatever support we can in the way of understanding..."

Glasscock says the loss of a pet is often a child's first experience with death. "They have no idea what it means, and if you just dig a hole in the back yard and throw it in, that's death to them," he says. "That's pretty devastating."

He says elderly people are especially hard hit by the loss of a long-time pet. "Sometimes it's their only companion," he says. "Their pet is their life. When they lose them at that age, it's devastating."

Food

the things that should be avoided.

Between 40 and 55 percent of the calories in fast food comes from fat. The American Heart Association recommends that no more than 30 percent of calories come from fat. The problem with fat is that it consists of "empty" calories with no vitamins, minerals or proteins. A meal consisting of a double-meat hamburger, a milkshake and french fries gets 46 percent of its calories from fat. That's approximately 14.5 teaspoons of fat, which is a lot of grease to drink down with a meal.

If you think you're being healthy by eating chicken nuggets, think again. Some places grind fatty chicken skin into their nuggets and then fry them in beef tallow to make them taste better. The fat in many chicken nuggets constitutes 58 percent of the total calories.

If you think you're being healthy by eating chicken nuggets, think again. Some places grind fatty chicken skin into their nuggets and then fry them in beef tallow to make them taste better.

Another big problem with fast food is high sodium content. The U.S. recommended daily allowance of sodium is between 1100-3300 mg. More than that can cause health problems. The meal mentioned above contains on average 1190 mg of sodium. Unless the person eats carefully for the rest of the day, will probably exceed the recommended daily sodium allowance.

Another problem with junk food is that it usually contains a lot of sugar. Sugar is also an empty calorie source. Soft drinks are the best example in that they supply little or no nutrients, yet are high in calories. These calories, while usually doing no direct damage to the body, contribute to weight gain.

The article did point out two deficiencies in junk food worthy of mentioning. Most meals don't contain enough calcium and fiber. The calcium problem can be quickly remedied by drinking milk or a milkshake. The fiber problem can be easily remedied by eating from salad bars now offered in many fast food places.
