commodity increases, the market price rises as well. "Equality in paychecks will equalize power within the family," he said. "Then wife beating and child abuse will decrease because women will be able to make it on their own. Women will no longer be socialized to be weak. We'll have more Margaret Thatchers and less June Lockharts." To overcome these obstacles, mation," he said. "You need to have something more concrete than guesswork." The health center, which recently became a member of the American College Health Association, has had outside consultants from ACHA as well as consultants from Texas A&M review health center operations, Lackey said. "I've been advocating computerization for a number of years," he said. The consultants supported efforts however, Cohn said women will have to adopt new strategies. "Women may have to fight, flirt or merit their way to the top even if they already outperform their male peers 2-to-1," he said. Men also employ these tactics, but Cohn said they will never have to manipulate their gender the way women will. Moreover, women are more visible as a different gender and sex, not just a minority. This can be used to an advantage, but if they make a mistake everyone knows about it.

to computerize operations, he said. The computers will benefit students, the health center and the University, Lackey said. He said students will receive faster, higher quality health care, while the University will get better utilization of resources and student fees. But Lackey warns against expecting overnight improvements. "The long-term benefits will be a year away," he said. "Everything should be on-line and we hope working fine by September 1990."
