LBJ High School demands action

Westlake may face UIL restrictions for racial slurs

AUSTIN (AP) — Students and parents from predominantly black LBJ High School are demanding that nearby Westlake High School be restricted from interscholastic activities because of racial slurs at a football game.

The Austin chapter of the NAACP filed a formal complaint over the slur Monday with the University Interscholastic League, which oversees extracurricular activities.

And Austin school superintendent John Ellis says school officials will conduct a separate investigation into the allegations that students from predominantly black schools face racial harassment from Westlake students.

During the Oct. 13 football game at the Westlake stadium, parents and students said, racial and obscene phrases were written on stadium seats where the LBJ band was sitting, and band members were verbally abused when they prepared to play at half-time.

A sign saying "nigger go home" was briefly displayed, and the same message was scrawled on bathroom walls, they said.

Westlake is in the nearby Eanes Independent School District, but both schools are included in the UIL's District 25-5A.

Eanes superintendent Don Rogers has promised an investigation.

"We're going to look into it," Rogers said. "Our students take it very seriously, along with our administration. The actions of a few can reflect very badly on all of them."

Rogers said Westlake Principal John Matysek addressed the student body over the intercom system Monday and read a letter of apology he wrote last week to LBJ Principal Dorothy Orebo.

The National Association for the Advancement of Colored People complaint to the UIL charged there had been racial incidents between Westlake students and other schools.

Bailey Marshall, UIL executive director, said the school could be reprimanded, placed on probation or suspended from participating in district activities in football. The committee's decision can be appealed to a state committee.

At a news conference Monday at LBJ High School, several students and parents expressed dismay at the racial slurs and obscene language.

"I am infuriated, insulted, and find these actions intolerable," Sandra Martin, president of the LBJ student senate and a band member said. "I would like to make a strong suggestion that Westlake be drawn from our district until they show they can act like human beings."

David Houston, co-president of the LBJ booster club, said, "This has been going on for years. I think Westlake needs to be out of our district."

Rogers said he thought some of the problem was "a lot of misunderstanding that might have resulted from our homecoming activities."

Students reported seeing a black dummy in LBJ colors hanging from a tree as they left Westlake stadium. But Rogers said the only dummy found was one Westlake seniors had directed at Westlake freshmen. The dummy had a brown paper bag over its head and was wearing a pair of pants, not LBJ's colors.

Mosbacher joins race for Lt. governor

AUSTIN (AP) — Pledging fresh ideas for state government and declining any invitation to join the "Austin crowd," Houston businessman Rob Mosbacher announced his campaign Tuesday as the first Republican candidate for lieutenant governor in 1990.

Two Democrats, state Comptroller Bob Bullock and state Sen. Chet Edwards of Duncanville, also have announced bids for the office that has been held by Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby since 1973.

"Our campaign is about bringing fresh, new ideas and innovation to Austin," Mosbacher, 38, said. "But I will fail if I follow the old political path of 'get elected, stay in office, and join the Austin crowd.'"

"So, let me turn down whatever lifetime membership may be extended to me in the future as a member of that Austin crowd, by making a pledge to you today. If you elect me lieutenant governor, I will leave that office after two terms," Mosbacher said.

Mosbacher ran for the U.S. Senate in 1984 and finished third in a four-man GOP primary won by Phil Gramm. Mosbacher opened his campaign for lieutenant governor in Houston, and included stops at Austin, Dallas and San Antonio on the first day.

He told supporters at the Capitol that he would hold state agencies accountable for their spending and performance. "I guarantee you that the phrase 'impartial, outside management audit' will no longer be a foreign language in Austin, Texas," he said.

Mosbacher said he thought the Legislature could correct inequities in public school finance without raising taxes.

He also said he opposes abortion except in cases of rape, incest or danger to the mother's life but would allow the Senate to vote on the controversial issue.

Education commissioner says state must devise plan to raise school money

TYLER (AP) — Education Commissioner William Kirby says Texas won't be able to solve the school funding problem by shuffling existing money around.

Instead, the state will have to find $1 billion to $3 billion in new money to comply with a state supreme court ruling to equalize school spending among Texas counties.

"The plan is going to take a significant amount of new money," Kirby said Monday. "And that new money is going to have to come from taxes, and in an election year, to get the Legislature to agree to a new tax bill is going to be a challenge."

Three weeks ago, the Texas Supreme court declared unconstitutional the state's method of distributing aid to poor and wealthy school districts. The court set May 1 as a deadline for legislators to find a solution to "glaring disparities" in state funding of the nation's second-largest public school system.

One possibility is consolidating school districts into countywide taxing entities, Kirby told the Association of Bullard Schools.

The state constitution prohibits a statewide property tax, but counties could levy such a tax.

State Rep. Bill Hollowell, D-Grand Saline, also spoke to the group. He said additional alcohol and tobacco taxes aren't out of the question to pay for school funding.

But, he said, "I can tell you it's going to be hard to get the votes on any one of them."

"I can vote for an increase on taxes for alcohol (and tobacco)," he said. "Alcohol is ruining a lot of lives, it fills up our jails, so I can vote for it, but I don't think it would pass."

"I represent three relatively dry counties, but big wet cities have always been against raising those taxes, especially (on) alcohol, because they say their constituents have to pay it and mine don't," Hollowell said.

Girl crawls from creek after assault

MARSHALL — An 11-year-old Louisiana girl was hospitalized here after being abducted, sexually assaulted and left for dead in a creek bed in southeast Harrison County, officials said.

Harrison County Sheriff's Deputy Claire Howell said the girl crawled out of the creek and went to a nearby residence about 1 a.m. Sunday.

Texas Department of Public Safety Trooper Briscoe Davis took the girl to Marshall Memorial Hospital, where she was admitted, Howell told the Longview News-Journal.

"We don't know where she was assaulted — either in Louisiana or Texas — and we don't have a description of her attacker, except that he is a white male with brown hair," Howell said.

Officials said the girl and her family were in Shreveport, La., for the Louisiana State Fair. At about 7:20 p.m. or 7:30 p.m., she went to the family truck to get something to drink.

"She never made it to the truck," Howell said. "He snatched her on the way."

Man connected to Matamoros cult sentenced for marijuana possession

BROWNSVILLE (AP) — The only person arrested in the United States in connection with a drug smuggling cult blamed for gruesome ritual murders near Matamoros, Mexico, was sentenced Tuesday to 18 months in prison for marijuana possession.

Serafin Hernandez Rivera, 45, pleaded guilty in July to possession with intent to distribute 113 pounds of marijuana in a 1987 drug transaction. The guilty plea was part of a plea-bargain agreement in which federal prosecutors agreed to drop other drug and gun charges against him.

Hernandez Tuesday told U.S. District Judge Filemon Vela he had reformed since his April 17 arrest on drug charges.

"Christ has already changed my life... I know it was a big mistake I committed, but I'm sorry," Hernandez told the judge in Spanish.

Despite Hernandez's 11th-hour pleas for mercy, Vela said he would stick by the plea-bargain agreement negotiated between Assistant U.S. Attorney John Crews and Hernandez's lawyer, Richard Hoffman, the Brownsville Herald reported Tuesday.

Prosecutors say Hernandez is not a suspect in the deaths of 15 men and boys found buried last April near Matamoros, Mexico, a city just across the Rio Grande from Brownsville. Some of the victims were horribly mutilated in occult ritual murders that suspects in custody in Mexico say were designed to bring magical power to the drug ring. Other victims are believed to have been killed for angering the ring's members in drug transactions.

Hernandez, a Mexican resident alien living in Brownsville, was arrested in Houston on the basis of information provided to U.S. authorities after the Mexican Federal Judicial Police on April 9 raided the Santa Elena ranch owned by Hernandez family 20 miles west of Matamoros. Thirteen mutilated men and boys were found buried there. Victims included 21-year-old University of Texas student Mark Kilroy. Kilroy had disappeared nearly a month before while celebrating spring break with friends in Matamoros.

Two other bodies were found later at a nearby communal farm.

Those on trial in Mexico include Hernandez's brother, Elio Hernandez Rivera, 26; and son, Serafin Hernandez Garcia, 22.

Another of Hernandez's brothers, Ovidio Hernandez Rivera, remains a fugitive in the case.

Hernandez had been free on a $50,000 bond since Aug. 18, when he agreed to cooperate with federal drug enforcement authorities in exchange for the dismissal of state charges.
