It's Working at M.D. Anderson!

"Our research will some day help cure cancer."

Stuart Mueller feels "most fortunate" to have landed a research assistant's job in one of M.D. Anderson Cancer Center's premier scientific laboratories upon graduating from college with a BS in Biology. After 18 months of performing assays and charting intricate data, he says the daily detective work is "even more fascinating than I had imagined". Many of the tests that Stuart conducts seek to clarify the cause of melanoma, a serious skin cancer. "It takes a lot of patience, but it's great to know that my efforts could some day help cure or prevent melanoma in people," he says.

We are currently seeking Research Assistants with a BS or MS degree in a science and training in one or more of the following areas: biochemistry, immunology, molecular biology, recombinant DNA techniques, tissue culture, or animal work. Openings in the following disciplines:

- PATHOLOGY
- NEURO-ONCOLOGY
- MOLECULAR PATHOLOGY
- INFECTIOUS DISEASE
- MOLECULAR GENETICS
- HEMATOLOGY
- NUCLEAR MEDICINE
- TUMOR BIOLOGY
- PHARMACOLOGY

In addition to the unlimited professional challenges and rewards at M.D. Anderson, we can offer you:

- Strong collaboration between clinical and basic science departments
- Opportunity to work with a diverse set of models and a wide variety of clinical material
- State-of-the-art technology
- Active continuing education programs
- Competitive benefits package
- Participatory retirement plan
- Interest-free relocation loan
- Special recreational features such as a swimming pool, jogging track and tennis courts

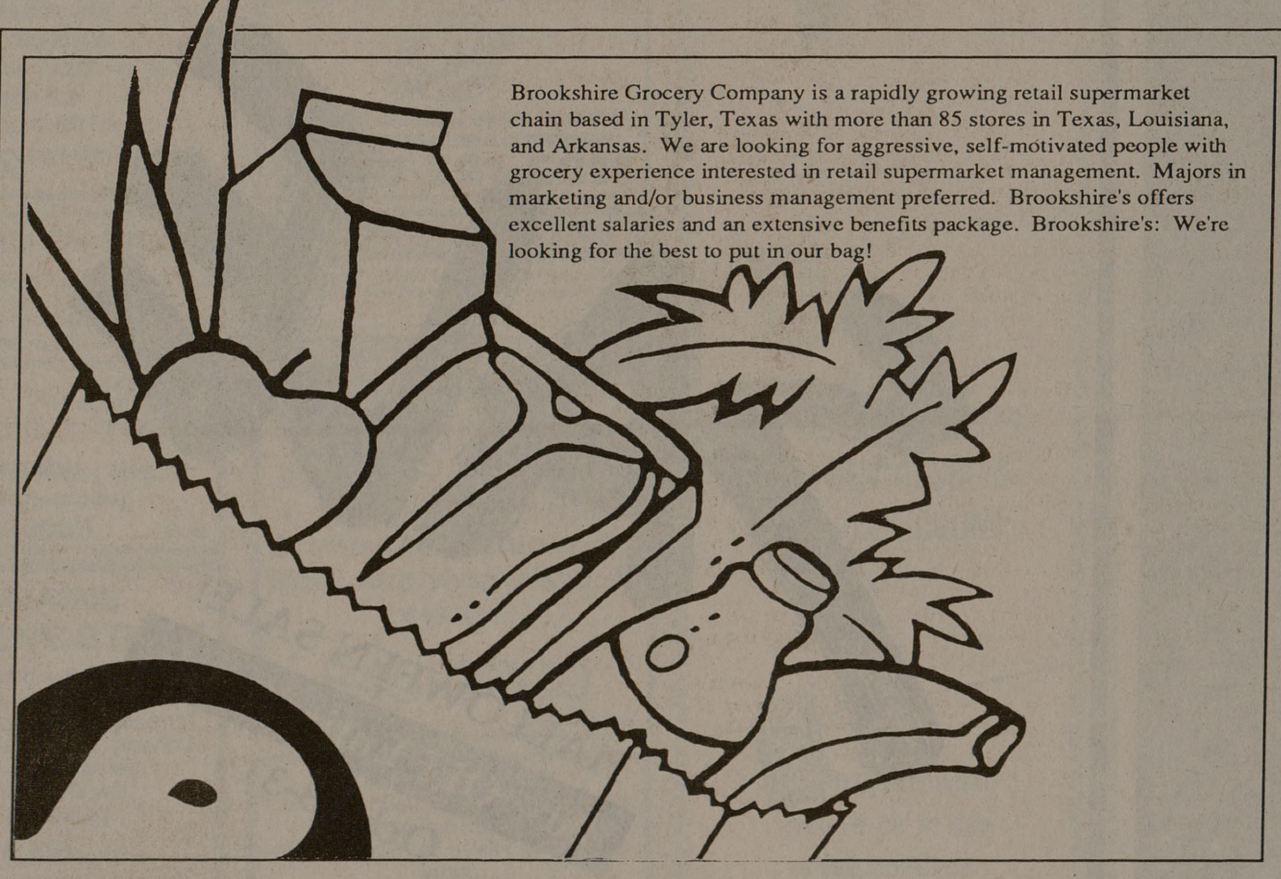

Explore these unlimited opportunities today! Salary commensurate with experience. For more information, please contact Pat Alfaro at (713)792-8009 or stop by our Employment Office at 1100 Holcombe Blvd., Houston Main Building, 1st Floor, Rm. 1.150 Monday-Friday between 9am-5pm. If you prefer, send your resume to: M.D. Anderson Cancer Center, 1515 Holcombe Blvd., HMB 205, Houston, Texas 77030.

Letter to the Editor

Get real, Alan!

SPORTS EDITOR:
 Someone please tell Lehman to get real! So Oakland will probably win the Series this year. I hardly find that reason to support the argument that the DH rule makes one league better than the other. Instead, why don't you look back to the mid-seventies and count who has won more All-Star games and Series?
 In response to the AL West dominance as a reason for the DH rule, I have two responses. One, look at the records. What did you say Lehman? Didn't they also have designated hitters? I guess that would be a sign of how the DH rule causes teams in the American League to be inferior. Hey, I used your same argument. Secondly, what goes around comes around. Two years ago everyone called the AL West the AL Weak. Minnesota won the division with a record barely over .500 (Guess what, they did win the Series). I believe the New York Mets were winning over 100 games a year also. And without a DH!
 Any way, the next time you want to make a rational argument Lehman, please research the past two years and please don't categorize an entire league of fans as Losers.

Cowboys face suit because of poor start

CARTHAGE (AP) — Dallas Cowboys' coach Jimmy Johnson and owner Jerry Jones aren't having a good year. The team is 0-7; Herschel Walker's defected; star quarterback Troy Aikman has suffered a hand injury.
 Now comes a Texas attorney who's threatening to sue because Jones hasn't turned the team around as he promised.
 Attorney Robert Goodwin of Center is demanding refunds for disgruntled fans or he may go to court under the state's deceptive trade act.
 The Cowboys are off to their worst start since they became a franchise in 1960.
 They were 3-13 last year, before Jones bought the team and promised they'd be competitive, if not Super Bowl contenders, before too long.
 Well, they've failed, Goodwin says, and fans deserve their money back.
 The attorney told reporters at a news conference Monday that he's written to Johnson and Jones demanding a refund policy for disenfranchised ticket holders.
 If they don't comply, he could file a class-action suit on behalf of those fans under the state's deceptive trade laws. They've got 30 days, he says.
 "They'll be mad, but if they're smart, and they haven't shown any such signs of that to this point, they will do what I've asked," he said.
 Goodwin says a part of the state's heritage has been tarnished by the Cowboys' inglorious start. He asked Johnson and Jones to consider changing the team's name "to avoid further embarrassment to a proud past."
 And there are the young people to think about, too.
 "You must imagine the anguish and abuse some 7-year-old child who proudly purchased and displayed a Cowboy jersey must have suffered at your hands this year."
 "Regardless of what the future seasons may bring, it is apparent to all football fans that you have forfeited this season, and all consumer monies invested herein," Goodwin wrote.
 Goodwin told Johnson and Jones he's not kidding. "Although you have made this team a joke, this demand is not," he wrote.
 Greg Aiello, sports information director for the Cowboys, said Wednesday that refunds probably aren't in the cards.
 The club regrets that the fans are upset, but advised them to be patient.

Ruddock understands Tyson's postponement

OAKVILLE, Ontario (AP) — Deprived of a chance to fight Mike Tyson in the ring, the Donovan "Razor" Ruddock camp settled for a war of words Thursday.
 Tyson, the undisputed heavyweight champion, bowed out Wednesday night from the scheduled Nov. 18 bout in Edmonton after complaining of a condition similar to pneumonia.
 Dr. Gerhardt Sollbach, physician for the Edmonton Boxing and Wrestling Commission, confirmed the diagnosis and compared the ailment to pleurisy, an inflammation of the lining around the lungs.
 "We don't want to ever question the doctors who put their professional livelihood on the line," Ruddock's business manager, Murad Muhammad, said at a news conference Thursday. "He is definitely sick."
 "What we are saying is if it was an athlete of less ability than Donovan Razor Ruddock, even with the sickness, the 18th would still be on."
 "But Mike Tyson realized that Donovan Razor Ruddock is just no ordinary athlete. You have to be 100 per cent when you step into the ring with him. So he needs to postpone it to get himself mentally and physically in shape for the fight that he now knows is (legitimate)."
 Ruddock, 22-1-1, was more restrained but still disappointed.
 "I don't know if they're playing psyche games," the Canadian fighter said. "But I'm going to be ready, that's the bottom line. It doesn't matter if it's a month from now, two months from now, whatever."
 "When that time comes, I'm going to be ready."
 But fearing cancellation and the loss of a $1 million payday, Ruddock and Muhammad will just have to wait.
 "We're the challenger, we don't want to sue Tyson," Muhammad said.
 "We don't want to say he forfeited the contract, because then we're playing right into their hands. Whatever they want to do, we're going to have to submit to it, even if it's not within the rules and regulations. It's in Don King's court."
 By contract, King has 60 days to name a date and site for the match, presuming Tyson's return to health, and is obliged to reschedule the bout within 90 days.
 But Muhammad made it clear Ruddock is willing to wait until late next year for a shot at Tyson, unbeaten in 37 fights as a pro.
 Ruddock's trainer, Janks Morton of Maryland, accused Tyson of underestimating the ability of the granite-muscled Ruddock, ranked fifth in the world after defeating James (Bonecrusher) Smith.
 "They sense it, they feel it and they're panicking," Morton said.
 Al Braverman, a King spokesman in New Jersey, countered: "When a guy like Mike Tyson complains of chest pains and a guy like Mike Tyson can't give it his all, what's the use of having the fight?"

Correa free agent after being sent to minors

ARLINGTON (AP) — Texas Rangers pitcher Edwin Correa has been offered an outright assignment to the American Association's Oklahoma City club and chose to become a free agent, officials said Thursday.
 The righthander, with three or more years of major league service, exercised his right to refuse the assignment, the Rangers said in a prepared statement. Correa became a free agent, effective immediately, the statement said.
 The 23-year-old Correa missed all of the last two Rangers' seasons with right shoulder problems. He pitched briefly on medical rehabilitation assignment in the Gulf Coast league in July. Correa went 0-2 with an 8.64 ERA in four games.
 He last pitched in a regular-season major league game on July 3, 1987. He spent the remainder of the 1987 season and all of the next two seasons on the disabled list.
 The Rangers now have 33 players on their major league roster. Correa, acquired by Texas from the Chicago White Sox in 1985, has a career major league record of 16-19.
