them will say, "Have you heard the one about Edwards yet?"

Edwards' son, Macon Edwards, director of computer services at Arkansas State University, said he has researched his father's past as well.

"When I checked into it, I just couldn't find anything to validate it, and I know a lot of people who are more competent haven't been able to find anything either. I believe the claims that my father went to A&M may have been politically motivated.

"I know he was given to telling some tall tales now and then — especially around his war buddies. I also know he thought highly of A&M and held his A&M stories very dear. But I just don't think there's any way to prove that he definitely went there."

There is no doubt Edwards won the Presidential Medal of Honor and the Distinguished Service Cross, an accomplishment few can claim.

It has been suggested that Edwards was simply a likeable, glib man who sometimes embellished his stories as he got older.

What is questionable is whether this man, who was listed in "Play's Believe It or Not" for most war decorations, ever attended Texas A&M University.

Believe it... or not.
