Game

won-loss record — even SMU's 2-5 mark.

"We come out and treat every team the same," Webb said. "Our goal is to reach the Cotton Bowl and we have to take everybody serious."

The Aggies have the firepower to run up the big numbers against a substantially smaller, inexperienced Mustang defense, and Slocum might seem to let the numbers on the scoreboard roll around a few times before he finally backs off.

But Slocum said his first priority on Saturday will be to come out and win.

"We'll come out and do everything we can to win the game," Slocum said. "I will never take a chance to jeopardize winning the game by pulling out my players too early. 'I've seen the other team come back in that situation too many times to where they have a chance to win.'"

Still, Slocum is conscious of running up the score on the Mustangs.

"I would never take advantage of an opponent's defenselessness just so I can embarrass them," Slocum said.

"I just won't do that."

If A&M jumps to a comfortable lead, Slocum said he would use the opportunity to give some of his younger players experience.

SMU runs an offense similar to Houston's Run-and-Shoot, and although they don't have the overwhelming talent the Cougars have, they are capable of putting some points on the scoreboard.

"They've got an explosive offense, so we need to be able to put some points on the board and stay ahead," A&M quarterback Lance Pavlas said.

The Aggie's defense is aware of the threat that Mustang quarterback Mike Romo possesses. Last week, Romo set a SMU record, passing for 450 yards on 47 attempts. In his first year at SMU, Romo already has moved up to the ninth spot on the school career yardage list.

His play has not gone unnoticed. "I really think he's going to give us a real challenge," Webb said. "If he keeps progressing the way he is, I think he can be a premier quarterback for them."

To neutralize Romo, the Aggies plan to use a similar defensive scheme that worked so well against Houston's offense.

"We need to get in his face and make him mess up a couple of times like we did to (Houston quarterback Andre Ware)," A&M linebacker William Thomas said.

The Mustangs realize the task that awaits them on Kyle Field.

"There's no question about it. It is one of the best teams in the country," Gregg said. "Look at A&M's defense with all the speed they have with their defensive linemen, linebackers and defensive backs."

"It's an awesome task in front of us."

The Aggies have shown much they've matured this season. A&M has refused to look past SMU.

"It would be easy to look beyond SMU, because they're so young, and focus on Texas and Arkansas," Webb said. "But our attitude this year has been to take one team at a time."

Pavlas said it best.

"This is a conference game. It's a must-win game," Pavlas said. "If we take SMU lightly, they'll use a great fight."

"For those last two games to me anything, we have to win this one."

Lehmann

shouldn't have any trouble with the Owls. The Hogs, 3-1 in SWC play, have lived by the run this season, and the Owls couldn't slow (much less stop) the Aggie ground game last week.

It's gonna be a long day for the Owls, and they probably won't even stop the Hogs from covering the 21-point spread.

The Houston Cougars get another shot to run up their stats against TCU. Is there anything sadder than a team with only numbers to play for? With no television appearances or bowl game to get national attention, the Cougars can only amass stats and blowouts to lure blue-chip recruits.

The Horned Frogs have been mediocre this year. They've played not well enough to stay in the race, but too well to attract sympathy. Poor Frogs, they'll earn some pity this week when the Cougars run over and shoot through them.

Talk about ugly. The mismatch at Kyle Field on Saturday might bring back images of the Roman spectacles. Throwing the Punies to the Aggie gladiators will be cruel.

The young Punies will be bruised up after a day of playing with the big boys, but not as embarrassed as they were after the 95-56 mauling at the hands of the Cougars.

The spread is 45 points, and the Aggies can cover it. However, Coach Slocum is more interested in getting to the Cotton Bowl than scoring 45 points.

There you have it, if you want bloody blowouts and teatime games, it'll be your weekend. If you're out of luck.

Romo

Shoot team up close and personal in Houston's 95-21 mauling of SMU two weeks ago, Romo says that the Mustangs' version needs work.

"The plays are the same (as Houston's), but I don't know if the execution is the same," he says. "We've surprised some people, but we've still got a long way to go."

Romo says the loss to the Cougars wasn't as hard to take as it might seem.

"It wasn't that hard to come back from," he says. "We knew Houston had a great team. Nobody gave us much of a chance."

"It was a tough defeat because nobody likes to get beat that way. We knew we were going to be in for some tough times this year, so we just blew it off, and got ready for North Texas."

Romo knows that SMU will face a monumental task Saturday. He likens the Aggie defense to the Cougar squad. SMU failed to score on UH's first-team defense.

"It's hard to say what A&M will do on defense," he says. "We'll just have to take what they give us, and I don't think they'll give us a lot."

"I expect the Aggie defense to be more physical than Houston's. They'll probably blitz us a lot."

What an understatement. If this one was a movie, it would be something like, "Godzilla vs. Bambi" or, "The Wrecking Crew meets the Rookie QB."

Either way, Romo will have work hard to stay relaxed Saturday afternoon, because the A&M defense won't want him to be bored.
