Rockets blow past Blazers in 109-86 win

HOUSTON (AP) — Mitchell Wiggins scored eight points during a third-quarter spree Tuesday night as the Houston Rockets coasted to a 109-86 victory over the Portland Trail Blazers.

Portland led 52-50 at halftime, but Wiggins' 18-footer started Houston on a 28-10 third-quarter run.

It was the Trail Blazers' second-lowest scoring quarter in franchise history.

Buck Johnson led Houston with 18 points, followed by Wiggins and Otis Thorpe with 14 each. Akeem Olajuwon had 13 points and 20 rebounds as seven Houston players scored in double figures.

Clyde Drexler led Portland with 20 points, while Jerome Kersey had 13.

Portland was 4-of-23 from the field in the third quarter, while the Rockets were 11-of-22.

The Rockets scored the first points of the fourth quarter, and the Trail Blazers never pulled closer than 18 points.

"Sometimes you have a quarter where you just run flat," said Houston coach Don Chaney. "They had a quarter when they couldn't buy a basket."

"And when you're missing shots like they were, you're susceptible to the transition game. We got a lot of baskets off the fast break."

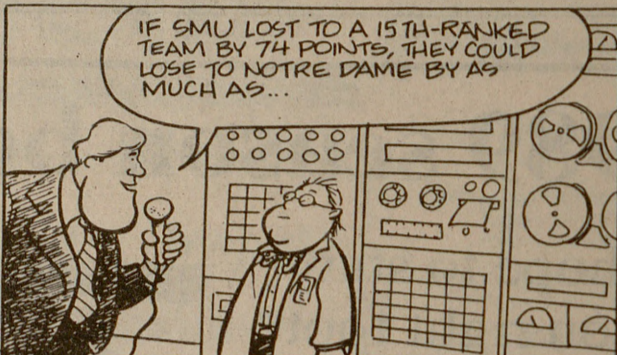

Portland's Buck Williams was critical of his team's shot selection.

"In the third quarter, we were rushing our shots and forcing our shots. We weren't running our offense," Williams said. "To make matters worse, they did a great job of rebounding. Akeem contested a lot of shots."

Portland coach Rick Adelman credited the Houston defense with the Blazers' third-quarter demise.

Houston's Lewis Lloyd suffered a sprained left ankle in the first quarter and did not return. His status was not immediately known.

Rowe, Hazard Players of Week

LUBBOCK (AP) — To Texas Tech linebacker Charles Rowe, football is about intensity.

"I just believe we just don't know how to lose," he said Tuesday, enthusiasm still in his voice three days after the Red Raiders upset Texas in Austin to raise their record to 6-2.

Before the season began, lots of media prognosticators would have predicted Tech to be holding a losing record by now, Rowe said, adding: "We don't go by what reporters have to say. We just go with what's in our heart and we maintain that intensity level."

Rowe kept his intensity level up against Texas, recording 15 tackles, 12 of them solo. He had a sack, two quarterback pressures and broke up a pass. For his performance, he was named Southwest Conference defensive player of the week.

The conference's offensive player of the week is Manny Hazard of Houston, who caught 19 passes for 194 yards and three touchdowns as the Cougars defeated Texas Christian, 55-10.

Rowe, a 6-2, 220-pound junior from Killeen, said he couldn't believe anyone would single him out of Tech's overall defensive against Texas. Stephen Erspoon recorded 11 tackles, including one for a five-yard loss forced Texas to punt from the yard line in the third quarter. Sammy Walker had two interceptions and nine tackles.

The defense frustrated quarterback Peter Gardner, who threw four interceptions. He completed 17 of 31 passes for 283 yards.

"All during the (preceding) game we worked on intensity," Rowe said. "We knew we had to pressure the offense and mind-boggle them. We worked on intensity during the game."

Orioles' Olson AL's outstanding player

NEW YORK (AP) — Gregg Olson, the relief pitcher who led Baltimore to the one of the greatest turn-arounds in baseball history, was voted American League Rookie of the Year on Tuesday.

Olson got 26 first-place votes and two seconds from a 28-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of America for 136 points. Kansas City Royals pitcher Tom Gordon got one first, 19 seconds and five thirds for 67 points. Seattle Mariners outfielder Ken Griffey Jr. got one first, two seconds and 10 third for 21 points.

Baltimore third baseman Craig Worthington was fourth with 16 points, followed by California Angels pitcher Jim Abbott with 10 points and Texas Rangers pitcher Kevin Brown with two points.

"Gordon had a great year and you have to wonder what would have happened if Griffey hadn't gotten hurt," Olson said from Louisville, Ky. "The same with Junior Felix. You can't expect something like that with all the guys around the league who had the years that they did. I didn't want to get my hopes up."

Olson, the sixth Baltimore player named Rookie of the Year, set an AL rookie record with 27 saves, breaking the mark of 23 by Doug Corbett in 1980. Olson's save total was eight more than the rest of AL combined this year. He is the first relief pitcher to win the AL honor.

"I didn't know if I was going to make the team coming out of spring training," Olson said.

Todd Worrell, who saved 36 games in 1986, is the only rookie to get more saves than Olson. Forster, who saved 29 games in 1972 at age 20, is the only pitcher to get more saves at a younger age than Olson, who turned 23 on Oct. 11.

Olson, relying on one of the sharpest breaking balls in the majors, did not allow a run after July 21, those 21 appearances, the right-hander gave up 11 runs and struck out 23 in 26 2-3 innings, getting 11 saves.

For all his success, though, Olson may remember the season more for one wild pitch he threw in the game.

The Orioles went into Toronto for the final week of the season, trailing the Blue Jays by one game in the AL East. The opener, Baltimore led 1-0 in the eighth inning, but a wild pitch by Olson in the ninth allowed the Jays to tie the score with two outs.

game over the last 11 games of last season.

"We've got enough athletes now to continue that style of play," Metcalf said. "We were going to make the transition (to the new offense) this year anyway, but after we played so poorly against TCU last year, we decided, 'Why wait?'"

Metcalf might have to wait a little longer before his Aggies win the SWC championship. A&M will have to beat conference favorites Arkansas and Texas to win the crown.

Last year, Arkansas took the championship with a 25-7 record. Texas, with first-year Coach Tom Penders, finished 25-9. A&M was in fifth with a 16-14 record.

Still, if the Aggies can start the season off the way they finished it last year, Metcalf may find himself in the position to win his seventh SWC championship.

The Aggies started their pre-season Tuesday night, playing Fort Hood in Fort Hood in an exhibition game.

The Lady Aggies traveled to Fort Hood also, and posted its first win in pre-season play Tuesday night, defeating the Fort Hood Tankettes 79-73 in Fort Hood.

A&M Coach Lynn Hickey was pleased at the team's first showing.

"We were a little shaky at times, but I was pleased with our overall performance," Hickey said. "Our younger players made a big impression."

The Lady Aggies received a big performance from junior Yvonne Hill, a transfer from Blinn College. Hill led the Lady Aggies in scoring with 19 points. She was 5-of-9 from the field and 8-of-8 from the free-throw line.

Hill also had one three-point shot and recorded three blocked shots.

together," Johnson said.

Right. I don't think the Cowboys' defensive secondary could cover SMU's receivers, no less the best of the NFL.

Redskins quarterback Doug Williams was just having an off night. After all, it was his first start this year after coming off back surgery. If Williams had been in his Superbowl form, the score easily could have been a repeat of the two teams' first meeting this season.

In that game, Washington embarrassed Dallas 30-7. One of the NFL's top-rated offenses, the Redskins were out of form Sunday night and the Cowboys just happened to be lucky enough to catch them unprepared.

So, the Cowboys went 0-8 through the first half of the season and now they are 1-0 at the beginning of the second half.

Should Cowboy diehards take heart?

Don't hold your breath for another Dallas win. The Cowboys' second half schedule is one of the toughest in the NFL. If they are to win another game, maybe they'll be able to catch another team that, like Washington, is slightly off in their performance level.

If they accomplished anything this season, the Cowboys did win one game. And what a big game they won. The Redskin-Cowboy rivalry may not be as intense as when both teams were fighting for a playoff berth, but it will always be a factor.

If the Cowboys don't win another game this year, that's all right. They humiliated the Redskins on national television and that's an accomplishment Cowboy fans everywhere can be proud of.

But, it's just as easy to be humbled when a frustrated Washington fan points out that the Cowboys still share the worst record in the NFL with Detroit.
