Davis gets Cy Young nod over Scott

NEW YORK (AP) — Mark Davis of the San Diego Padres won the National League Cy Young Award on Tuesday, easily beating Mike Scott of the Houston Astros.

The 29-year-old Davis, who led the majors with 44 saves, got 19 first-place votes and four seconds for 107 points from a 24-member panel of the Baseball Writers Association of America. Scott, the 1986 winner, got four firsts, 14 seconds and three thirds for 65 points.

Greg Maddux of the Chicago Cubs was third with three seconds and eight thirds for 17 points. Orel Hershiser of the Los Angeles Dodgers, the 1988 winner, was tied for fourth with one first and two thirds for seven points, along with Joe Magrane of the St. Louis Cardinals, who got one second and four thirds.

Tim Lincecum of the Dodgers and Scott Garrelts of the San Francisco Giants were tied for sixth with four points, followed by Rick Reuschel of the Giants with three points and Mike Bielecki and Mitch Williams of the Cubs with one point each.

Davis, a free agent, is only the fourth reliever to win the NL Cy Young, joining Steve Bedrosian (1987), Bruce Sutter (1979) and Mike Marshall (1974). Davis is the third San Diego player to win; Randy Jones (1976) and Gaylord Perry (1978) are the others.

Davis was 4-3 with a 1.85 earned-run average and 92 strikeouts in 92 2-3 innings and had a win or a save in 48 of San Diego's 89 victories. He was dominating throughout the season and finished just two short of Dave Righetti's major-league record for saves and one short of Bruce Sutter's NL record.

Davis converted 44 of 48 save opportunities and allowed just 13 of 75 inherited runners to score. He saved 12 games from Sept. 1 on and stranded his final 19 inherited runners, allowing just one of his last 29 to score. He finished the year with a streak of 24 2-3 scoreless innings, giving up just eight hits over the span.

Davis also was dominating at the start, beginning the season with 17 saves in his first 17 opportunities. The streak was broken against Houston on June 6, the start of his only inconsistent period this year. From June 6-24, he blew three saves in six chances.

His contract negotiations with the Padres have not gone well and Davis could be the first Cy Young winner to start the next season with a different team. His agents, Randy and Alan Hendricks, say there is only a 10-percent chance he will re-sign with San Diego.

Davis made $600,000 last season and did not have any bonus clauses for the Cy Young.

Former OU players' trial opens Woman can't identify men in alleged attack

NORMAN, Okla. (AP) — A 20-year-old Oklahoma City woman told jurors Tuesday that she couldn't identify her attackers but said she was raped at least three times in the Oklahoma football dormitory on Jan. 21.

The woman was one of the first witnesses in the first-degree rape trial of former Sooners football players Bernard Hall of Detroit, Nigel Clay of Fontana, Calif., and Glen Bell of Muskogee. The three were charged in February in the alleged attack on the woman.

The woman recounted details of the evening for the jury of five women and seven men selected Monday to hear the case in Cleveland County District Court. The woman, who has since married, was composed as she testified. She sobbed some and had trouble recalling some specifics about the events of that night nearly 10 months ago.

She said she went to the dormitory with a girlfriend, that she drank alcohol in Clay's room and that she was initially grabbed by someone as she came out of the bathroom.

"He took hold of my shoulder. He took me to the bedroom, took hold of my zipper and started moving it down real fast," the woman said. She said she tried unsuccessfully to get away from the person.

"The next thing I know I was on the floor and he was on top of me," she said.

The woman said her underwear was removed and the attacker placed a hand over her mouth and nose and "then he started trying to rape me."

She said two people tried unsuccessfully to rape her. A third person was successful, she said. She said she wasn't sure if a fourth person was successful, but said attacks by two more people were successful.

When lights came on in the bedroom afterwards, she said she heard someone ask "What's going on here?"

"Then Nigel came into my line of vision ... I said 'What do you think's going on Nigel, they raped me,'" the woman testified.

She said she wanted to leave the dorm room afterwards and drove away with her girlfriend at one point. But she said her friend insisted on returning to the dorm and she relented partly because she was in no condition to drive.

In earlier testimony, Sherelyn Osborn-Medice, who was in the dormitory that night, said she heard a loud scream and banging noises coming from Clay's room.

Osborn-Medice said she was in the room of football player Larry Medice — now her husband — and heard what sounded like a scuffle in Clay's room, which was directly above Medice's room.

"I told Larry 'It sounds like some girl's getting her butt kicked,'" the woman testified.

Osborn-Medice said she later asked Medice to go upstairs to see what was going on. When he came back, she said, he told her "Let's go because a girl has just been raped."

The woman testified that while District Attorney Tully McCoy was investigating she told him the noises she heard may have been screams of passion.

Defense attorneys focused on that portion of her testimony during cross-examination.

In his opening statement, McCoy noted that the alleged victim would not be able to identify any of the people who attacked her. But he said other witnesses would bring the picture into focus.

"At the close of the state's evidence, you will have some unanswered questions," McCoy said. "... but you will have no reasonable doubt that this man Bernard Hall, this man Glen Bell and this man Nigel Clay did force (the woman) to have sexual intercourse with them against her will."

Oilers' Harris excels Monday night

HOUSTON (AP) — It would have been difficult for Leonard Harris to make a more spectacular exit from Houston coach Jerry Glanville's doghouse.

Harris stepped into the glare of prime time Monday night for injured Drew Hill, caught his first NFL touchdown pass and snagged several other key passes that helped the Oilers beat Cincinnati 26-24 in a pulsating game.

"I knew the whole world would be watching and I knew that I could still play," Harris said. "Coach Glanville told me at the half Drew was hurt and I'd get a chance to play."

Harris, who had caught one pass for 13 yards this season, shocked Cincinnati with a 36-yard reception in a three-play, 80-yard drive that gave the Oilers a 23-21 lead.

Harris completed that drive by catching his first touchdown pass in 2½ seasons with the Oilers, a 23-yard pass from Warren Moon.

"All Leonard Harris did was come in and make big plays for us," Glanville said.

Those were comforting words for Harris, who has played in Houston's first six games but was on the inactive list two games and did not play in a third.

"I was in the doghouse," Harris said. "I fumbled against New England and the next couple of weeks I didn't get a chance. I'm just fortunate that I was able to contribute when I got the chance."

Hill, the Oilers' leading receiver, suffered a back injury and sat out the second half.

Johnson: Walls staying in Dallas

IRVING (AP) — Dallas coach Jimmy Johnson denied Tuesday he is trying to unload nine-year veteran cornerback Everson Walls, who was beaten on a critical touchdown pass in a 24-20 loss to the Phoenix Cardinals, by replacing him with Issiac Holt.

Walls, who has 44 career interceptions since signing as a free agent in 1981, charged that Johnson is trying to ease him out, saying, "He's setting me up to make a change."

"I'm not trying to run him (Walls) off but Holt will play against Miami just as we planned," Johnson said. "Everson will start but he can play better than he has without question."

Johnson blamed Walls' "breakdown" in coverage on the first of two fourth-quarter touchdown passes by Cardinals quarterback Tom Tupa. The second touchdown pass also was thrown in Walls' direction, but he was not specifically blamed for that mixup.

The Cowboys lost for the ninth time in 10 games. Walls and Johnson had a shouting match on the field after the game as Walls visited with several of his friends on the Cardinals.

"Different people take losses different ways," Johnson said. "When you have a loss like the one we had on Sunday I'm not in a jovial mood. I'm not one to carouse with friends. It eats at my insides. I'd just as soon see my players go to the locker room so we can visit about the game."

Walls, 29, said other players also were visiting with the Cardinals and that Johnson's action "embarrassed me. Only college coaches and Mike Ditka do that. He treated me like a child. Around here you're damned if you do and damned if you don't."

Johnson tried to downplay the controversy. "More is being made of it than what there is. No one player or players causes a team to lose a game," he said. "There are a lot of plays that go into a game."

He said he doesn't mind if players express their opinions but added, "I can accept it more when a player is performing up to my expectations. I'm not as concerned about a player talking who is performing. Everson has done a good job but can do much better."

"I've expressed my disappointment to him."

Walls doesn't have an interception this year. But he ranks second on the club's career interception list, trailing only Mel Renfro, who had 52 during a career that spanned from 1964-77.

Walls has led the league in interceptions an NFL-record three times. He has been the club leader five times. "I guess they'll Plan B me," Walls said, referring to the NFL's unprotected list. "I wonder about my future here."

Holt was obtained from Minnesota last month in the blockbuster Herschel Walker trade and has been getting more practice time in Walls' position.

"We've planned all along to get Holt more action," Johnson said. "We had this planned a long time before Sunday's game."

The Cowboys try to win their first game in Texas Stadium this year when they play host to the Miami Dolphins at noon Sunday.

Tech duo nab SWC Players of the Week

LUBBOCK (AP) — Texas Tech enjoys the rare honor of having the offensive and defensive Southwest Conference players of the week: running back James Gray and safety Tracy Saul.

Gray rushed for 209 yards on 19 carries and scored three touchdowns Saturday in a 27-0 rout of Texas Christian in Lubbock.

Saul, only a freshman, intercepted two passes — and missed a third — and had 11 tackles, eight solo. He intercepted two passes the previous week against Texas.

"I did not think Tracy Saul would do this well," coach Stan Dykes said at his weekly news conference Monday, shaking his head in wonder. "He's had an outstanding year as far as big, visible plays."

Saul, who graduated six months ago from Idalou High School just northeast of Lubbock, intercepted a pass in Tech's season opener and was starting in the fifth game, against Texas A&M.

"It's unusual to have a freshman come in and adjust like Tracy did," Tech defensive coordinator Carlos Mainord said. "He's a very intent player as far as watching and listening. He's going to be a great one before he's through."

Similar things were said last year about All-Southwest Conference safety Donald Harris, who left Tech early for a baseball career after being drafted by the Texas Rangers. Saul's job was to replace him.

"I like to work hard every day and try to make a workout as much like a game as you can," the 6-foot, 180-pound safety said.

Gray, a senior, works just as hard — he is a fixture at the student recreation center during the off-season, running lap after lap around the vast gym — but there was considerably more pressure for him to produce at the beginning of the season. Dykes called him the only name player on a no-name team.

The 5-10, 210-pound Gray said he didn't feel pressured.

"As in anything, you can have a name player, but you have other guys around you, kind of like a supporting cast, to take the pressure off you," he said. "That's what I told the guys at team meeting we had this year was that the pressure was not on me, but it's on the rest of the team to get the job done, also."

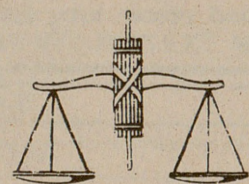

Against TCU, Gray rushed for more than 200 yards for the fifth time this season. He has an SWC leading 1,177 rushing yards this season with games remaining against Southern Methodist and Houston. With 46 career touchdowns, he needs four more to become the conference's career touchdown leader. He's third behind Bill Burnett of Arkansas with 49, and SMU's Eric Dickerson, with 48.

Gray consistently gives most of the credit for his success to the rest of the team, especially the experienced offensive line.

"Some of the teams we face don't have as much ability or as much talent," Gray said. "But think the heart is there, and we've got great work habits."
