AUSTIN (AP) — Alice Sessions, wife of FBI Director William Sessions, has resigned as head of a highly touted Texas anti-drug pro-gram in a dispute over its fund-raising and spending practices.

Sessions said her abrupt depar-ture from the "Join the Move" pro-ject a month ago also followed complaints that telephone solicitors had used the FBI chief's name to court donations.

"I just couldn't be associated with that," she told the Austin American-Statesman. "I didn't get real accoun-tability from them. So I got out."

Officials of the program, spon-sored by the Austin-based Texas Department of Public Safety Officers' Association (DPSOA), said there was no wrongdoing. "She may have some particular disagreements with some of the things that the association is doing, but I think overall our goals are posi-tive," DPSOA Executive Director Lane Denton said. "We're willing to commit money to a program' that hopefully can be helpful."

The DPSOA was targeted four months ago in a controversy over phone fund raising by police groups. State Rep. Keith Oakley, an advocate of tighter restrictions on phone solicitors, said Sessions' complaints will rekindle the issue.

Oakley, D-Terrell, helped write legislation to require such fund-rais-ing groups to disclose how much of the money they raise goes to charity and how much to cover administrative costs. Gov. Bill Clements vetoed the bill in June, calling it unnecessary. "I strongly feel that the resignation of Mrs. Sessions will give an added measure of interest to resur- their phone campaign.

rect that legislation and should arouse public awareness of some serious problems," Oakley said.

Sessions began serving as an un-paid honorary chairman of "Join the Move" in January, when the pro-gram was launched with endorsements from state officials. School rallies and video and poster contests followed, stressing the anti-drug theme in grades 5-7.

As the campaign grew, Sessions said, educational materials were being sent out late and planning appeared disorganized. In response to her concerns, she said, DPSOA began paying her a $1,000-a-month

DPSOA has a contract with an Arizona firm to raise money through phone solicitations. Boxes of spices, jellies and sauces are sold for $27.95 each, and DPSOA gets a royalty, Denton said.

A portion of the royalties were to go to "Join the Move," Denton said, and solicitors began touting it in

Clements supports floor price on oil

HOUSTON (AP) — Gov. Bill Clements told two Cabinet officials Monday that a new national energy policy should include a $20-a-barrel floor price on oil for five years. In remarks before a U.S. Department of Energy hearing, Clements told Energy Secretary James L. Watkins and Secretary of the Interior Manuel Lujan that the key to developing an en-ergy resource base is through incentives and improved technology.

"World oil prices are set by OPEC (Organization of Petroleum Exporting Countries) and other nations which hold most of the world's oil reserves," Clements said. "That's why it is in our nation's best interest to establish a floor price and

I urge that a floor be imposed for five years, at least five years, at $20 per barrel.

• "To put that figure in perspective, $20 a barrel in 1989 equates to about $11 a barrel 10 years ago. That's just about where world oil prices were before prices shot up in 1979, due to the Iran-Iraq war

The $20 floor price would ensure survival of an already volatile price range for oil, he said. Oil prices peaked in the early 1980s, but prices plunged to less than $10 per 42-gallon barrel in the summer of 1986.

Congressman Joe Barton, R-Ennis, agreed with Clements' floor price idea, but suggested the price be set at $25 per barrel.

Other suggestions included more funding for research and exploration-oriented tax incentive Monday's hearing at the University of Ho-ton was one of six this month throughout the country being held in an effort to form a nation energy plan.

Sen. Phil Gramm also urged that oil produce be given tax incentives to boost production. In opening remarks, Lujan said the Unit States currently relies on foreign imports in more than 42 percent of domestic oil consum-tion. He urged domestic producers to explore for oil and natural gas domestically instead d taking their business overseas.

But a spokesman for an Hispanic group said journalists still have concerns over the safety of reporters in Central America.

Sal Valdez, 44, a manager and re-porter for Cadena Radio Centro, a Spanish-language radio network based in Dallas, had been missing from San Salvador since Nov. 28 But network president Barrett Alley issued a statement Monday saying Valdez was all right and would arrive in Dallas Monday night.

Hispanic groups had planned a vigil for Valdez when it was assumed he was dead.

Anna Macias, a vigil organizer and vice president of the Dallas-Fort Worth Network of Hispanic Communicators, said the focus of the vigil would be changed from a memorial to a platform to protest conditions in Central America.

'As far as we're concerned, we're just going to say that we're really,

Alley was "somewhere in California," network controller Bill Cherry said. He said he did not know where Alley was or how to reach him.

Valdez arrived in El Salvador Nov. 25 to report on the latest outbreak in that country's civil war.

Javier Rubio, a CRC reporter, said Valdez had filed seven to 10 stories per day during his stay. Nearly all dealt with current or former members of the Salvadoran government, including President Alfredo Cris-tiani and the country's minister of defense.

The barge was located is north of the Lynchburg Ferry east Harris County when it e ploded about 1 p.m., Tooley said Houston Fire Department boats and a sheriff's marine div sion boat were on the scene pour ing water on the burning barge. The initial explosion sent withick black smoke that was visited from downtown Houston, about 20 miles away.

U.S. Coast Guard officials said the crew was cleaning the barg that had been carrying a form natural gas.
