

CORRECTION

The Good Times Liquor ad that appeared in the Jan. 25 issue of The Battalion contained incorrect prices. The correct prices are: Bacardi Light Rum, 1.75L, 80 proof, $14.79; Jim Beam, 750ml, 80 proof, $7.29.

CHILL OUT! rent • a • fridge

Spring Semester Rentals

4.1cu. ft. - $50 + $10 deposit
2.8 cu. ft. - $35 + $ 5 deposit

Rent now in 221 Pavillion (Student Government Office)

Delivered to your door Sat. Jan. 27

8-5 Mon. - Fri. until Jan. 26

Questions? Call 845-3051

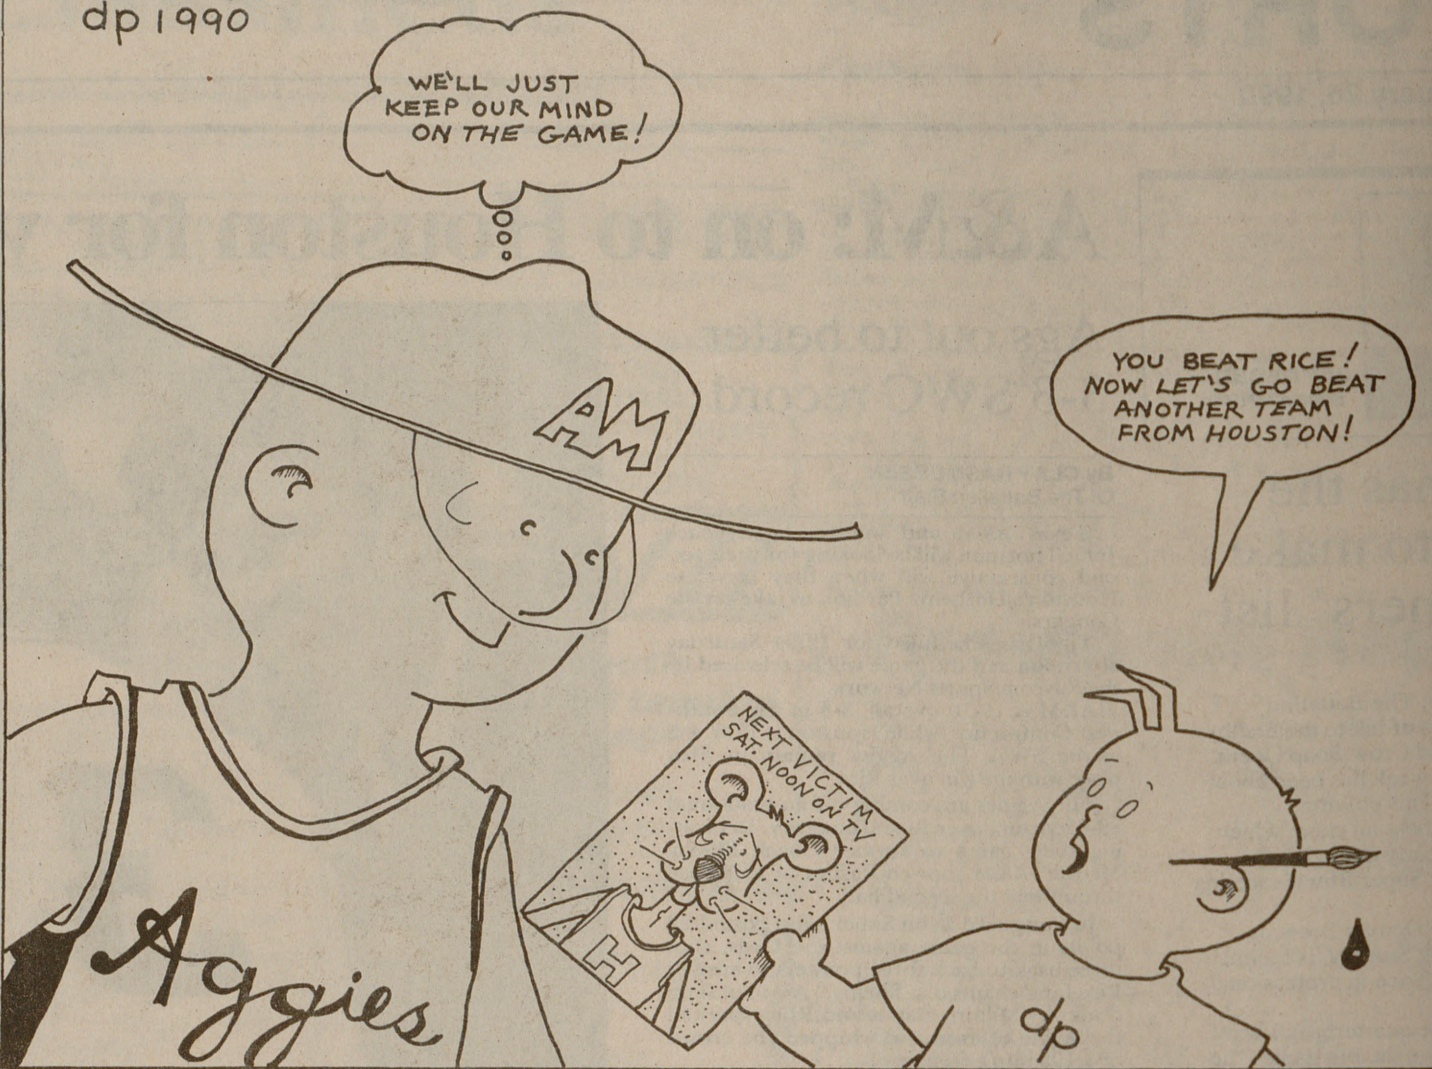

SENIORS

We want YOU in the 1990 Aggieland

Pictures will be taken from January 22-26

at AR Photography 707 Texas Ave. 9am-5pm

dp 1990

Noah excited about Lendl Frenchman will need everything to beat No. 1 seed

MELBOURNE, Australia (AP) — There was a fraction of a second in Yannick Noah's victory over Ivan Lendl two weeks ago when Noah leaped for a volley and hung horizontally in midair.

His racket outstretched and his dreadlocks flying, Noah poked the ball over the net and won the point.

Noah, the rejuvenated 29-year-old Frenchman, will need all of that acrobatic effort, and more, to beat Lendl again Friday in the semifinals of the Australian Open.

"I don't think I have to adjust my game," Noah said. "I have to play my game. Yeah, I beat him. I hope he remembers." The victory two weeks ago came in a tuneup in Sydney. This is for the finals of a Grand Slam, and the No. 1 Lendl is a different player when the big money is on the line.

In the $3 million Australian Open, the men's winner gets $200,000, the runner-up $100,000 and the semifinalists $50,000.

The 29-year-old Lendl has earned more than any other men's player in history — over $15.7 million in tour events — and he is particularly tough in Grand Slams. He won the Australian last year, the U.S. Open three times, and the French Open three times. He's also been runner-up in seven Grand Slam finals.

Yet he knows he'll have to raise his game to handle the hot Noah.

"I will have to play better than in Sydney, and hopefully he won't have as good a serve," Lendl said.

For the second year in a row, Lendl came to Australia early to work on his game with coach and former player Tony Roche. This is the first step for Lendl on his quest for the most important title for him this year — Wimbledon — the one he has never won.

Noah has been under the tutelage of American coach and former player Dennis Ralston, and has come back to the form he showed nearly seven years ago when he won the French Open, his only Grand Slam title.

Noah, seeded 12th, started slowly in the Australian, barely winning a five-set, first-round match over Yugoslav Goran Prpic, but has improved with each match. In the quarters, Noah's serve was strong and his net attack effective in a straight sets victory over Sweden's Mikael Pernfors.

If Noah has been peaking, so has Lendl, who beat young Soviet Andrei Cherkasov in straight sets in the quarters.

The other semifinal will pit two Swedes — third-seeded Stefan Edberg against eighth-seeded Mats Wilander.

Both have been down this road before. Edberg won the Australian in 1985 and 1987, Wilander in 1983, 1984 and 1988.

Oiler Smith's son injured in hit-and-run

HOUSTON (AP) — A felony charge was filed against a driver whose car was speeding through a residential area when he struck the son of Houston Oilers Move nosegaurd Doug Smith.

Douglas Smith Jr., 5, was admitted Sunday to Hermann Hospital in critical condition, but was upgraded to critical but stable condition Monday.

"He's doing great," said Smith, who said he expects to take his son home by week's end.

Darrell Charles Reed, 24, was arrested about 7 p.m. Monday and charged Tuesday with failure to stop and render aid, a third-degree felony, said Sgt. J.M. Montemayor with the Houston Police Department's hit-and-run division.

The accident occurred about 5:40 p.m. Sunday in southeast Houston near a friend's home where the Smiths were having dinner after attending church services, Smith said.

The boy was playing ball in the street with several neighborhood children just before the accident, Smith said.

Montemayor said witnesses told police that Reed stopped the car and got out after the accident, but then drove away when he was confronted by neighbors.

He said investigators obtained a vehicle description.

Peden

(Continued from page 7)

- Fran Tarkenton
• Vince Ferragamo
• Ron Jaworski
• Ken Anderson
• David Woodley
• Dan Marino
• Tony Eason
• Boomer Esiason
• John Elway

These are all good quarterbacks, but only two can be considered "great." Tarkenton is in the Hall of Fame. Marino has a very good chance to join Tarkenton in the Hall, and, being still active, he has a decent chance to jump to the winners' list.

Elway certainly would like to jump to that list. He already is a member of the losers' list, having led the Broncos to blowout losses to the Giants in 1987 and the Redskins in 1988.

Elway came into the NFL as one of the most heralded rookies ever. Several scouts said he could possibly be the best quarterback ever. He had all the tools when he came out of Stanford University. He had speed, scrambling ability, smarts and a cannon for an arm, even when on the run. The only thing he didn't have was a championship.

He has accomplished many things in his career. He has led his team to two Super Bowls, which is no mean feat. He has gained a reputation as one of the most talented quarterbacks to play in this decade. In the AFC Championship Game in 1987, he led the Broncos on the drive, that since has been known as The Drive, proving he could win the big game.

Table with 12 columns and 10 rows of research study listings including Cold Study, High Blood Pressure Study, Fever Study, Painful Muscular Injuries, and Cedar Allergy Study.

Aggie Cinema advertisement for movies Honey, I Shrunk the Kids and Ferris Bueller's Day Off, including showtimes and admission prices.