Aggie honored
Herner named
Player of Week

DALLAS (AP) — The weekly honors for players of the week in Southwest Conference men's and women's basketball go to Todd Day of Arkansas and Lisa Herner of Texas A&M, the league office announced Tuesday.

Lisa Herner

Day, a 6-7 sophomore swingman from Memphis, Tenn., scored 59 points and pulled down 14 rebounds in the Razorbacks' victories over Texas and Alabama-Birmingham last week.

Herner, a 5-6 guard from Wilton, N.D., had 34 points, 15 assists, 5 rebounds and 5 steals in the Lady Aggies' two victories last week.

She was 9-of-12 from the field and 10-of-11 from the free throw line in A&M's 88-67 victory over Houston.

It is the second time this season that Day has been honored as player of the week and the third time an Arkansas player has won. Herner is the third member of the Aggies to win SWC player of the week honors.

Oilers hire coaches

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers coach Jack Pardee took the first step toward implementing a full-time run-and-shoot offense Tuesday by naming Kevin Gilbride as offensive coordinator.

The Oilers also announced a contract extension for General Manager Mike Holovak and named former Oilers linebackers coach Floyd Reese assistant general manager.

Gilbride was the Oilers quarterbacks coach last season under former coach Jerry Glanville, now head coach of the Atlanta Falcons.

"We'll be focusing on the one-back attack and I believe we'll be able to take it a step further," Gilbride said.

Under Gilbride's tutelage last season, quarterback Warren

Moon had his best season in the NFL and earned the starting assignment in the Pro Bowl.

The Oilers ran a version of the run-and-shoot called the Red Gun, with four wide receivers and Moon in a shotgun position. The Oilers also used a two-back set.

Now the Oilers will concentrate on the run-and-shoot, Pardee said.

"The Oilers have been using a Red Gun the last three years and when you look at the percentage of the yardage made, a big percent has been out of the Red Gun," Pardee said.

"It has so many new things we can do offensively, so many weapons that we're going to devote our time to that."

output, averaging 12 points per game, amassing a career-high 26 points against Houston.

Tech, on the other hand, while flourishing defensively, is struggling to generate offense.

Derex Butts, the Red Raiders' leading scorer, is averaging 13 points per game. That's almost double what the other four starters average.

However, Thornton is still wary of the down-and-out Red Raiders.

"They're just in a rut that when it goes bad, it snowballs," Thornton said.

The Aggies also are in danger of working themselves into a losing streak. After dropping three straight conference games to SMU, Texas and Arkansas, A&M basketball was rocked with the loss of Shelby Metcalf, the Aggies' coach of 27 years.

Suddenly Metcalf, not basketball, was on everyone's mind.

"It was a tough situation," Thornton said. "I've had tremendous support from people close to the situation — students, faculty and administration."

"We couldn't block something like that out. But we couldn't let it get in our way either."

The team responded well in the game following Metcalf's removal, defeating Rice 89-82, giving Thornton his first win as A&M's head coach.

Things looked bright for the Aggies, who seemed to rally around Thornton after the loss of Metcalf.

But the Aggies dropped their fourth SWC game to the Cougars. Thornton now wants A&M to regroup, put the Metcalf affair out of their minds and just have fun.

Farst converted the technical shotto to give the Lady Red Raiders a four-point lead, 39-35.

It got worse.

On the inbounds pass, Tech's Kelly Shilling made a driving layup and was fouled on the play by A&M's LaTanya Irving. Shilling converted the three-point play to put Tech up, 42-35.

The Lady Aggies couldn't overcome the series, and Tech went on to lead by as much as 17 with 6 minutes left in the game. A&M did make a late charge, cutting the Tech lead to nine points with :52 left, 68-59.

Hickey said Tech's defense was a definite factor in the loss.

"Tech changed defenses," she said. "They sank so much on man-to-man that I thought our outside game would be stronger."

Madison led the Aggies with 17 points on six rebounds. Lori Dillard added 15 points.

Farst was the high scorer for the Red Raiders. Lynch also had 16 points and seven rebounds.

"I think we played tentatively and LaTanya didn't play her normal game," Hickey said. "We can't let up now. I think we'll be a better team over the next eight games, and we still have the opportunity to finish with a good seed in the conference standings."

"Possibly, we'll peak by tournament time."

With the loss, the Lady Aggies dropped to 12-7 overall, 4-4 in the Southwest Conference. Tech improved to 12-7, 5-3.

The Lady Aggies host Baylor Saturday at G. Rollie White Coliseum. Tipoff is set for 2 p.m.

And what about picking teams at the beginning of a game?

If we shorter guys don't know either of the two team captains, then we can safely assume that we won't get picked. Unless of course there is no one left to pick from, and you'll hear that all too familiar saying, "I guess we'll take him."

Don't you hate when that happens?

Some may think the game of basketball is for tall guys only. Whether it's on the playground or on the National Basketball Association level.

True, basketball players nowadays are slammin' and jammin' left and right with the greatest of ease. And there has been talk about raising the average basketball goal from 10 feet to 11 feet.

But what about us shorter players? We didn't pick our height.

And a lot of smaller guys can do just as much with the "jam" on a lower goal.

As a matter of fact. Some little guys don't need a fitted goal. Case in point — Spud Webb.

This 5-8 guard has not only proved himself by playing in the NBA, but has also won a dunk contest during an NBA all-star game.

Yes, this little bundle of energy even beat out some of the great "big men" in the league during this contest. Such as Jordan, Clyde "The Glide" Drexler, and fellow teammate Dominique Wilkins.

I bet if Webb made a great pass in a pickup game everyone would give him high-fives and slap him on the back and say, "Great pass, little man!"

I guess the next step for us shorter guys is to establish NBA recognition. God knows Webb probably went through the same stuff as me and my fellow "short" friends did.
