

Mattox requests apology from Richards

ASSOCIATED PRESS

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Jim Mattox called on opponent Ann Richards to apologize Thursday to blacks and Hispanics for a remark she appeared to make while discussing abortion during the Democrats' televised debate. "Every time she is allowed to speak in public without a script or without one of her handlers speaking for her, she ends up making a terrible mistake," Mattox charged. At issue was an answer Richards, the Democratic primary front-runner, gave to a question during the Wednesday night debate. Early in the debate Richards said she would veto a bill that would forbid abortions for girls 16 years of age or younger. "I cannot arrive at any conclusion but that no legislator, no judge and no bureaucrat has any business in determining whether a white woman has an abortion or not," she appeared to say. After the debate Richards said she didn't recall exactly what word she used, but added that "white women ... is not a phrase that I use. I think what I said was 'why women.'" Monte Williams, Richards' campaign press secretary, said the candidate was saying "whether or why" — not white — in her answer. Neither of her debate opponents — Mattox and former Gov. Mark White — questioned Richards about the remark during the debate, nor did any of the panelists who were posing questions to the three candidates. But the subject came up during a news conference after the debate. But Thursday, Mattox said he thinks many Texans were insulted by her comment. "Based on the calls in my campaign office, both by the press and by the public, it's very evident that a great number of people in the state of Texas were offended by her performance," Mattox said. "When they let her off the leash, so to speak, and let her deal with the public and to open questions, she almost invariably makes a mistake," he said. Williams said the campaign would respond to Mattox's criticism later in the day.
