Hance

"Once a person is convicted and sentenced to the penitentiary but can't get in, the state government should pay for the cost of housing the prisoners in the county jail," Hance said.

Anyone convicted of the use or possession of illegal drugs will be denied certain state benefits. These denied benefits include drivers licenses, college loans and welfare benefits.

"This proposal would coincide with Senator Phil Gramm's proposal that people will lose federal benefits if convicted of felony use or possession of drugs," Hance said.

He said anyone arrested on drug charges who posts bond and is arrested on another felony drug charge before trial, should be considered a menace to society and not allowed out on bail again.

"I think we must take a long range approach to solving our drug problems," Hance said.

To begin solving Texas' drug problems, Hance said he will create a drug education course to be taught at every school in the state.

He said he will also create a "factory behind fences" program at prisons.

Private businesses would be recruited to build distribution centers inside prison walls. Prisoners would be paid minimum wage to work at the plants and the state would keep 80 percent of this money.

The money would help the state pay the cost of operating the prison and provide restitution for the victims of crime.

"The victim of crime has been forgotten for too long," Hance said.

He said he will pay more attention to the needs of victims by forcing judges to explain all sentences given to criminals so the victim can understand why the person was punished in the chosen way.

Hance said he will appoint a victim to the Board of Pardons and Parole, and he wants victims to have input when the board is considering criminals for parole.

opportunity for students to share their opinions and experiences on topics such as education, unity, health, and world hunger, while listening to those of other cultural backgrounds.

• Friday — International Week concludes with the Talent Show and Traditional Dress Parade at 8 p.m. in Rudder Auditorium. Some of the performances will include the traditional music of Latin America and the classic dances of the Orient. Admission is $3.50.

Glaindo stresses that International Week is not meant solely for international students.

"Aside from letting the international students proudly display their heritage, I hope that these activities will serve as a learning bridge for the American students at A&M," she said. "Perhaps they will really enjoy themselves and become interested."

Tickets for the Buffet International and Talent Show-Traditional Dress Parade are on sale at the MSC Box Office and Ticketron outlets. A combination ticket for the Buffet International and Talent Show-Dress Parade can be purchased for $10.
