Dream becomes nightmare

Alleged attacker of volunteer remains at large

DALLAS (AP) — A 16-year-old boy who was counseled to stay in school by an "I Have A Dream" volunteer allegedly stabbed his benefactor during an attempted robbery, Dallas police say.

JoAnne Roosevelt, 51, whose husband is Elliott
Roosevelt Jr., the grandson of President Franklin D.
Roosevelt, was stabbed 10 times in the face, chest and HOT TIE DYE SWIMSUIT COVERUP OR LEGGINGS hand, authorities said.

JoAnne Roosevelt, 51, whose husband is Elliott Roosevelt Jr., the grandson of President Franklin D. Roosevelt, was stabbed 10 times in the face, chest and hand, authorities said.

said Roosevelt's family had requested no information be given on her condition. She was listed in serious condi-

The Dallas Morning News reported that Roosevelt and her husband had invited the youth and a friend to their Dallas home Friday.

According to police, the two teens spent the afternoon playing pool and visiting with the couple. Roosevelt volunteered to drive the youths home and anybody else.

was choked with a rope or belt while driving her 1989 Chevrolet Suburban, police said.

The teen whom Roosevelt had helped for three years then pulled a knife from his coat, stabbed Roosevelt and grabbed for her purse, police said.

An arrest warrant charging attempted murder has been issued against the teen, who remains at large.

During the struggle, Roosevelt's car hit a pole. She escaped from the vehicle, but the teen she knew chased her and continued to stab her, authorities said. As a crowd gathered, the two suspects fled. The second teen has not been identified, police said. The Roosevelts have been volunteers with the "I Have A Dream" program since its inception in Dallas three years ago. The program is part of a national program to keep "high-risk" students enrolled in school.

Foundation president Walter Durham said the stabbing was the first crime among the hundreds of relationships volunteers have had with students during the past three years.

"This has been very upsetting," he said.

The program has 800 Dallas volunteers, each of whom works with two or three students, Durham said. Volunteers meet with students monthly and often invite them to movies, sports events and their homes, he said.

Detective J.A. Trevino, who spoke with Roosevelt after the stabbing, said, "I think she's more shocked than

A continuing drought in Central Texas threatens to keep lowering the rain-fed Edwards Aquifer, which feeds the crystal-Aquirer, which reeds the crysta-clear river, according to the Texas Academy of Science. The San Marcos spring flow is down quite a bit," said Jane Maler, a geologist at Southwest Texas State University where the academy held its annual meeting on Saturday.

The Edwards Aquifer, an underground river, is one of the most productive in the United States, according to the Environmental Protection Agency.

A report from SWTSU says continued dryness and excessive pumping have helped cause a significant decline in the natural

Underground homes help cut heating costs how

TEXARKANA (AP) — The December big chill meant a January big bill, and some people still were recovering from it in February. In rural areas, some propane bills ran more than $400.

But Edsel Hicks' heating bills for his three allelectric rent houses averaged $60 for that period. From his own designs, Hicks has built economical, low-energy houses he calls "Earth Homes."

Hicks' houses, which are underground except for their fronts, are around a lake on Farm Road 2148 west of Texarkana. He said cars often stop on the highway to get a long look at these houses built into the slopes.

"I also save on insurance," Hicks said. "I carry no insurance on the homes because they don't burn down, get hail or storm damage, or have trees hit the roofs. I advise the renters to insure their property inside, but that's it."

Hicks said that to his knowledge, these are the first rental houses designed and built like this in Texas, and perhaps in the country. People from all over the country write asking his advice on how to build them, he says.

Hicks did not know how to do it himself when he built the first one 10 years ago. He figured it out as he went along and kept testing the houses for safety and maintenance. He has driven tractors and heavy machinery over them, and they never have gotten a crack, or had a leak or shown any sign of damage, he said.

"The concrete just gets stronger as years go by," he said. "Unlike regular homes, these homes improve with age and will not hit their maximum strength until they are 50 years old."

The first one was built out of solid concrete, the next out of 12-inch cinder blocks core-pored with steel, and the last with treated timbers

Inside the Earth Homes, Hicks said, the sessons are not quite the same as outside becaused the "fly wheel" effect — the time it takes for the temperatures to penetrate the earth, which is si weeks to two months behind the weather. Bu they stay cool in summer and warm in winter.

He said the savings in utility bills and insurance are not the only economical part of the houses. They cost about $20 a foot to build if you supervise it yourself, compared to more that double that for above-ground brick houses. The houses have two bedrooms and one bath.

The underground houses also provide safe during tornado season.
