Spurs owner denies rumor of possible sale

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Spurs owner Red McCombs is denying reports that he has been negotiating to sell the NBA franchise in recent days.

Unnamed sources told the San Antonio Express-News that a group of businessmen is engaged in serious talks with McCombs about purchasing the Spurs, who have made a dramatic turnaround after sinking to 21-61 last season.

"There's nothing to it," McCombs said after the Spurs' 111-98 victory over the Miami Heat on Saturday. "The club is not for sale. I haven't talked to anybody."

The sources told the newspaper that a group of potential buyers was in the city for several days last week and will continue negotiations with McCombs this week. Sources indicated that earnest money, showing seriousness of intent, could exchange hands this week.

The franchise could be sold for $70-75 million and would remain in San Antonio, the sources said.

"I don't have any idea where this is coming from," McCombs said. "Number one, it's not for sale. Number two, I haven't talked to anyone."

McCombs said he hasn't received any inquiries from potential buyers in "about two months," though he added, "I don't keep records on those things."

McCombs said he was approached by parties interested in buying the Spurs "two or three times a month" last season, when the club finished with the worst record in its history. "I never knew how serious some of those people were," McCombs said.

McCombs became the Spurs' majority stockholder in 1988, when he bought Angelo Drossos' share for $47 million.

Ag track team opens outdoor season in College Station Relays

The Texas A&M track team kicks off its outdoor season in the College Station Relays this weekend at the Frank G. Anderson Track Complex.

The Aggies finished the indoor season with a second place finish in last weekend's NCAA Indoor Championships at Indianapolis, Ind.

"We had a really super performance," head coach Charlie Thomas said.

Arkansas edged out A&M by eight points, but, Thomas said, the Aggies have a good chance of beating them in the outdoor season.

"We feel like we can beat Arkansas," he said. "We just couldn't overcome them because they have so many long distance runners stacking their team."

Thomas said that when the outdoor season begins, A&M will pick up some of its stronger events.

Two athletes stand out in this year's squad, he said. Junior shotputter Mike Stulce and junior sprinter Andre Cason each led the team with first-place victories.

Stulce's throw of 70-6 1/4 was a personal best as well as the longest recorded throw in the world for this year. He beat the second place competitor's throw by over six feet.

"I think the point's not to throw far, it's to dominate the event," Stulce said.

The only two throws this year over 70-feet were thrown by Stulce, who has improved his personal best by over 18 inches in one year.

Cason was equally as impressive in the meet, taking first place in the 55-meter dash with a time of 6.07 seconds. His previous time of 6.04 is the world's fastest 55-meter dash time this year and the fourth fastest ever.

The College Station Relays give A&M the opportunity for a fresh start, Thomas said.

"Our indoor people are getting this time to rest," Thomas said. "And the outdoor people will just be beginning."

He said last week's second place finish gives the team the confidence it needs for the outdoor season.

The Aggies and Louisiana State have the upper hand in the relays but A&M is at a disadvantage after losing two of its top competitors to injuries.

At the NCAA indoor meet, Stulce hurt his elbow while throwing and possibly will sit out for two weeks. In addition to Stulce, senior sprinter Howard Davis broke his foot and will be out for at least 3 weeks. Thomas said. Davis is a two-time NCAA Indoor All-American and member of the 1,600-meter relay team that set a new school record with a time of 3:08.57.

However, the Aggies have other stars. Junior Steve Lofton not only a defensive back for the A&M football team, but a quick sprinter in relays.

"We were looking for a good quarter-miler and we found him in Steve Lofton," Thomas said. Lofton can turn out to be a reliable anchor as well as a good sprinter, he said.

The women's track team has potential as well, but LSU has a powerful team, Thomas said.

Junior high jumper Sandra Hunt will enter outdoor competition ranked eighth in the NCAA. Hunt's previous jump of 5-11.25 tied with the school record.

Thomas said he is optimistic about this weekend's competition, which begins with preliminaries at 8 a.m. Friday and multiple events Friday and Saturday at noon.

Ag netters host strong TCU team

Home Southwest Conference play begins this weekend for the Texas A&M men's tennis team as they host the defending conference champion Texas Christian Horned Frogs, 1:30 p.m. Friday at the Omar Smith Tennis Center.

The Aggies, 0-2 in conference and 11-4 in spring season play, hope to score their first conference win against a formidable enemy.

The Horned Frogs, ranked 11th

by the Volvo/Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association, contain two ranked singles players in No. 21 Luis Ruette and No. 24 Tony Bujan, and the seventh-ranked doubles team of Ruette and Sandon Stolle.

"I think we've got a good chance to do ourselves some good this weekend," A&M coach David Kent said. "TCU is tough, but we feel like we can play with them and we're looking forward to the challenge."

Last time out, A&M received the consolation title at the University of Texas Spring Break Tournament.

The Aggies went into the tournament 9-4 for the season and faced the 14th-ranked Longhorns in the first round.

A&M blew out Oklahoma for a consolation title, winning 5-1 in singles play with no need for doubles.

TCU will be worthy opponent for the Aggies this week. Best coming off of a 5-4 win victory over No. 12 Louisiana State last weekend, TCU has defeated Arkansas at Rice, both tied for the 24th position in the Volvo/ITCA rankings. The Horned Frogs are 3-0 in SWC play.
