Umpires say they'll return to work Sunday

PHILADELPHIA (AP) — Major league umpires now say they will return to work Sunday under an agreement that reimburses them for games canceled during the 32-day vacation days during the regular season.

Lawyers for the umpires and the leagues reached the court settlement Thursday, U.S. District Judge Norma L. Spiro reopened a hearing on the ball's request for an order for the umpires back to work.

The agreement also calls for umpires to receive regular-season diem payments beginning Saturday and for the leagues to repay the umpires for travel deposits made before January 31, but forfeited because of the lockout.

The American and National Leagues will divide a $48,500 payment among all umpires.

Richardson looking to break one more barrier

DENVER (AP) — Nolan Richardson remembers his high school days in west Texas when he wasn't allowed to watch South-west Conference games.

Now he's got a Southwest Conference team two games away from a national championship.

In 22 years of coaching, Richardson has knocked down one racial barrier after another and left people smiling. He has taken jobs because of the challenges they presented and because he felt obliged to try to open doors for other blacks.

Only one hurdle remains, and it has nothing to do with color.

"In this tournament a lot of people talk about the money," Richardson said this week. "But I'm different. I'm an old-fashioned guy. I'm playing for the trophy."

It's the kind of remark you would expect from Richardson, who has been a winner at every level.

He was raised by his grandmother in El Paso, Texas, where he was all-state in football, baseball and basketball. He says he never felt the sting of prejudice while growing up in a predominantly Hispanic neighborhood, but he was subject to discrimination.

That's the way it was in the South, Richardson knew that. He also knew it wasn't right, so he worked to change attitudes.

He became the first black coach at a mixed-race high school in El Paso. His teams went 190-80 in his 10 seasons, and three times he was named coach of the year.

Then it was on to Western Texas Junior College in Snyder, Texas, where he became the first black head coach at any junior college in the state.

Richardson took his team to the national junior college tournament each of his three years there, capping it with a national championship in 1980. Then he moved to Tulsa, where — again

Arkansas' Oliver Miller may help coach Nolan Richardson win his first national championship. The Hogs play Duke Saturday.

Richardson now says he's as happy as can be. Razorback fans, he says, are the best in the country. But when times were bad, when the wolves were howling, Richardson gave serious consideration to leaving.

It was a talk with his daughter, who died in 1987, that changed his mind.
