State targets minority groups in smoking campaign

DALLAS (AP) — The Texas Department of Health is hoping to be one of 20 applicants approved for a nationwide program aimed at reducing smoking among ethnic minorities, women and young people. The American Stop Smoking Intervention Study for Cancer Prevention, or ASSIST, wants to reduce smoking by 43 percent in seven years. It is co-sponsored by the National Cancer Institute and American Cancer Society.

"This is a great opportunity for all of us who have recognized what a tremendous problem smoking is, but who haven't had the resources to really attack it," said state Health Department spokesman Ron Todd, coordinator for the Office of Smoking and Health. "This would provide the funding, staff and materials used to address the smoking problem comprehensively."

The Health Department is targeting Dallas-Fort Worth, Houston and San Antonio. If selected, the state will receive a National Cancer Institute grant to cover all expenses, Todd said.

"There's children who grow up and the only messages they see day after day are billboards that show smoking as glamorous and associated with success and good living, and that's really not the case at all."

— Ron Todd, Health Department spokesman

An ASSIST program goal is to reduce the number of smokers from 27 percent to 15 percent of the population by the year 2000, said Joe Patterson, director of Government Relations and Special Projects for the American Cancer Society.

Participants for ASSIST will be announced in June 1991, Patterson said.

Todd estimates that there are 16,697 smoking-related deaths in Texas each year, about 14 percent of all deaths, at a cost to taxpayers of $3.3 billion each year.

Black men die from smoking more than any other group. Eighty-nine of every 100,000 black men will die from respiratory cancers and 295 per 100,000 of heart disease, Todd said.

That compares to 58 deaths from respiratory cancers and 234 deaths from heart disease per 100,000 white men, Todd said.

Police Beat

The following incidents were reported to the Texas A&M University Police Department between March 22 and Friday.

SEXUAL ASSAULT:

A woman reported that she was sexually assaulted by her ex-boyfriend in her Dormitory 2 room. The couple was discussing the renewal of the relationship when the assault occurred.

Four days later, the woman told two UPD investigating officers that she would not file charges against the man if he would receive counseling for his action. The man's attorney agreed to this recommendation.

TERRORISTIC THREAT:

A woman reported that her ex-boyfriend, his brother, sister and the man's new fiance have been making harassing and threatening telephone calls to her room in Krueger Hall.

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF:

A man said someone purposefully placed a finishing nail in his bicycle tire causing it to deflate.

An antenna assembly was pulled out of the fender of an Isuzu truck parked in Parking Area 42.

An exterior mirror on a Toyota vehicle was damaged by a blunt object while the vehicle was parked in Parking Area 5.

Seven bicycles were stolen in separate incidents on campus.

Four wallets were reported stolen in separate incidents. Two of the wallets were unsecured.

A Panasonic PV-4700 VHS video player was pried from its mounting and stolen from a room in the Biological Sciences Building West.

MISDEMEANOR THEFT/PUBLIC INTOXICATION:

During surveillance of Parking Area 56 an officer observed a subject remove a yellow car cover from a parked vehicle. The suspect placed the car cover in a dark colored vehicle and proceeded to leave the area. An officer located and identified the suspect and found the man to be in possession of the cover. He was incarcerated in the Brazos County Jail.

CRIMINAL TRESPASS/PUBLIC INTOXICATION:

While on foot patrol of campus property an officer observed two intoxicated people walking around on the outside of the Academic Building dome area. They were incarcerated in the Brazos County Jail for criminal trespass and public intoxication. The matter was referred to Student Affairs.

RECOVERED PROPERTY:

A wallet reported stolen March 5 was found with its contents intact.

ARSON:

A student was arrested for arson in connection with the fire damage of A-3 lounge Nov. 11, 1989. The man was jailed in the Brazos County Jail.

FELONY THEFT:

A man was arrested for stealing a large quantity of laboratory equipment from the Chemistry Building last year. He was incarcerated in the Brazos County Jail.

DISORDERLY CONDUCT:

The Davis-Gary Hall resident director requested assistance from a UPD officer to identify a male visitor in the residence hall. The subject was identified. Investigation continues.

Senate approves reform bill House researches ways to finance education

AUSTIN (AP) — School finance battle lines were drawn Tuesday, when the Texas Senate again approved its $1.2 billion reform bill and Gov. Bill Clements proposed a no-new-taxes plan for next school year that carves $269.5 million from other parts of the state budget.

In the House, leaders met privately to write a $450 million bill and began the search for ways to fund it, on the second day of a second special session on court-ordered school finance reform.

Mike Toomey, Clements' chief of staff, said the governor would sign into law an education funding plan that shifts money from such areas as the Parks and Wildlife Department and the Capitol restoration project and increases fees paid to the state for information on a driver's record.

Up to another $172 million could be gained by temporarily reducing the state's contribution to the Teacher Retirement System, Toomey told House budget writers, although the governor's office is not proposing that idea. He said the system is so overfunded that retirement benefits could be increased simultaneously with the reduction.

Clements was critical of the Senate's bill, which is the same measure senators passed in the 30-day special session that ended last Wednesday.

"They're posturing, and that's all they're doing," he said. "They know that the House will never agree to that, and I won't either."

But Sen. Carl Parker, bill sponsor and Senate Education Committee chairman, said, "It's a matter of us doing what we thought ought to be done, and the what $1.2 billion represents.

"I for one think that he (Clements) ought to have an opportunity to show his commitment against decent education by vetoing a decent bill," said Parker, D-Arthur.

Other lawmakers expressed concern that putting little state money into school finance reform could increase in local property taxes. The $13.5 billion year finance system, which was ruled unconstitutional by the Texas Supreme Court, relies on state aid, local property taxes and some federal funds.

The court, which found disparities in funding available to property-rich and -poor districts, gave lawmakers until May 1 to change the system.

Parker's measure also had its critics in the 31-member Senate, including Sen. Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant. Ratliff unsuccessfully tried to amend the measure including an attempt to trim its cost to $650 million next school year.

"What we're doing is playing a legislative game of chicken. We ought to send something over there that has some chance of arriving at a compromise with the House," said Ratliff, one of 10 senators who registered "no" votes against the bill after it passed on a voice vote.

Man shares sailing adventure with students

AUSTIN (AP) — William Pinkney has a dream. Part of it is to become the first African-American man on a solo voyage to sail around the world via the five great capes.

The other part is to teach minority youngsters that even if others discourage them, they can achieve their goals by working hard and making sacrifices.

The 54-year-old Chicagoan shared his dream recently with students in the Austin Independent School District, including those at Pearce Middle School.

"Does any one of you have a goal?" he asked the Pearce teen-agers. Few raised their hands. "Every goal requires you put something into it. The only free thing you get is your name. For your goal to work, you have to study and sacrifice the time and effort."

Pinkney, who was an X-ray technician in the Navy for eight years and has 20 years sailing experience, has spent the past five years laying plans to circumnavigate the globe.

He lacked the $350,000 needed to finance the voyage. But he didn't lack determination. So he spent countless hours knocking on doors, trying to find corporations to sponsor his 11-month odyssey.

He plans to set sail in June from New York City's South Street Seaport on a 47-foot cutter which will be outfitted with the latest technology including a computer tracking system and a VCR. When Pinkney noted the boat also has a sophisticated, built-in stereo system with 250 tapes — his only entertainment onboard — it brought oohs and aahs from the students.

The boat also will be outfitted with marine radio equipment donated by Motorola Inc., which sponsored his Austin trip.
