Restaurant Report

The restaurants listed below were inspected by the Brazos County Health Department between March 26 and Friday. Information is from a food service establishment inspection report.

SCORED BETWEEN 95 AND 100:
Chinese Fast Food at 805B Wellborn Rd. Score — 97. Points were deducted for unsatisfactory maintenance of non-food contact surfaces, unclean non-food contact surfaces of equipment and utensils and unclean floors. It was a regularly scheduled inspection.

SCORED BETWEEN 90 AND 94:
Confucius Chinese Cuisine at 2322 Texas Ave. S. Score — 94. Points were deducted for improper food protection during storage and unprotected outer openings. The restaurant was inspected because of a customer complaint.

University Towers at 410 Texas Ave. S. Score — 93. Points were deducted for improper food protection during storage, unprotected outer openings and unsatisfactory wall and ceiling construction. The restaurant was inspected because of a customer complaint.

Pizza Classics at 2406D Texas Ave. S. Score — 92. Points were deducted for improperly maintained plumbing, unsatisfactory hand-drying devices, unprotected outer openings and unsatisfactory wall and ceiling construction. It was a regularly scheduled inspection.

Southfork Restaurant at 3702 Texas Ave. S. Score — 91. Points were deducted for improper storage of food-dispensing utensils, unsatisfactory maintenance of food-contact surfaces, unsatisfactory maintenance of non-food contact surfaces, unsatisfactory access to toilet and handwashing facilities and improperly cleaned outside storage area enclosures. It was a regularly scheduled inspection.

David Jefferson, a registered sanitarian at the department, said restaurants with scores of 95 or above generally have excellent operations and facilities. He said restaurants with scores in the 70s or low 80s usually have serious violations in the health report. Scores can be misleading, Jefferson said, because restaurants can get the same score by having several minor violations or a few major violations. He said the minor violations can be corrected during the inspection. Point deductions or violations in the range from one point (minor violations) to five points (major violations).

Jefferson said the department might close a restaurant if the score is below 60, the personnel have infectious diseases, the restaurant lacks adequate refrigeration, there is a sewage backup in the building or the restaurant has a complete lack of sanitization for the food equipment.

The department inspects each restaurant every six months. Jefferson said a follow-up inspection is sometimes required if a restaurant has a four- or five-point violation that cannot be corrected during the inspection, or if there are numerous small violations.

Inspectors at the department are registered sanitarians.

Richards discounts allegation of drug use, blames opponent

Associated Press

Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards on Thursday denounced an unattributed allegation that she was in a restroom where several women appeared to be smoking marijuana almost 11 years ago.

"Do you think this country has reached the point now ... that unsubstantiated people can say what they want to and suddenly it takes on the vein of truth by appearing on television and in the newspapers?" Richards said at a campaign stop in Dallas.

Richards blamed her runoff opponent in Tuesday's primary election, Attorney General Jim Mattox, for spreading rumors about alleged drug use.

Mattox has said he possesses sworn statements from people who say they know Richards used illegal drugs in the past. But Mattox repeatedly has refused to reveal the names of those people or offer any other evidence to back up his drug accusations.

The Houston Post on Thursday quoted a woman it didn't identify as saying she had seen Richards with a group of women in the restroom of an Austin hotel during the National Association of Women in Construction convention in 1979.

The woman, who refused to tell her story unless guaranteed that her name not be used, told the Post "When you walked in the door you could smell the definite aroma of marijuana."

"When I walked in (Richards) put her hand behind her and held it," she said. "The girl on the end, who did not know, had a roach or a joint that had been smoked down in her hand."

The Post report said the woman felt compelled to report the incident after watching Richards refuse during televised debates to answer yes or no to the question of whether she had ever used illegal drugs.

Richards, a recovering alcoholic, has said she has had an alcoholic drink nor a mood-altering chemical 10 years.

Asked about the alleged 1979 incident, the state treasurer said, "I have no idea what they're talking about."

Richards said Thursday she was shocked the allegations had been reported. "The surprising part is that now people are willing to put it in print, with no substantiation at all," she said. "That's not what this country is all about."

Bentsen: Printing errors, forms shortage threaten census accuracy in Texas

WASHINGTON (AP) — Thousands of Texas households may not be participating in the census because of "gross printing errors" and a shortage of Spanish-language forms, Sen. Lloyd Bentsen said Thursday.

Bentsen, D-Texas, said the Census Bureau has refused to correct its mistakes in Texas and has responded instead to complaints about the 1990 head count with excuses and explanations.

"I must deplore the way the census is being administered in Texas," Bentsen told Census Bureau Director Barbara Bryant in a letter Thursday.

"This is particularly true in El Paso, San Antonio, Corpus Christi and South Texas," Bentsen said. "In these areas, complaints and problems abound which, if not cured immediately, threaten the integrity of the census in Texas."

Comment from the Census Bureau was not immediately available.

Population estimates from the decennial head count are used to decide how millions of dollars in federal funds are spent on everything from education to highways, as well as a state's representation in the U.S. House of Representatives.

The Texas Comptroller's Office estimates an undercount in 1980 cost Texas $300 million in federal funds throughout the 1980s, while a similar undercount this year could cost the state $500 million and a seat in the House, according to spokesman John Bender.

Citizens from the Rio Grande Valley to El Paso are complaining about a shortage of Spanish-language forms, Bentsen said. Texans trying to call toll-free numbers repeatedly encounter busy signals and some say Census workers have been unwilling or unable to assist them.

"So far, the response from the Census Bureau has been to explain and excuse the problems that have arisen," Bentsen told Bryant. "We don't need explanations and excuses; we need quick, strong steps to cure these problems and ensure the completeness of the count in Texas."

Under the 1990 Census, Texas stands to add three seats to its 27-member House delegation in Congress. An accurate count could possibly bring the delegation's total to 31, however, Bender said.

'Bang Man' could set Texas record

DALLAS (AP) — The "Bang Man" bandit — so-called because he fires a shot into the ceiling of banks he robs — is on his way to breaking a bank robbery record in Texas.

The FBI is blaming the Bang Man for 12 bank robberies in the Dallas area and 24 in all in Texas and California in a streak that began in July 1986.

His take is more than $300,000 in the two dozen holdups, said Dallas FBI spokesman Wood Specht.

The robber earned his nickname for his habit of firing a shot into the bank ceiling during his robberies. The Bang Man also has struck once each in Lubbock and Austin and 10 times in the Los Angeles and San Diego areas, authorities say.

No one has been hurt in the robberies, but police are worried that that might change.

His use of a gun "can set into motion a chain of events where a good Samaritan or vigilante-type person might get hurt trying to do something about it," Specht said.

"He's a rather strange fellow," said M.K. Ratcliffe of the North Texas Regional Clearing House, which has offered a $7,500 reward for information leading to the robber's indictment.

"In one robbery he wore a morning coat and stovepipe hat and beard," which briefly earned him the nickname "Abe Lincoln Robber," Ratcliffe said.
