Soviets admit downing its aircraft 30 years ago pursuing U.S. plane

MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet army per, said the Soviets lost a MiG-19 newspaper disclosed for the first time Sunday that when the Russians downed a U.S. spy plane 30 years ago they also destroyed one of their own fighters that was pursuing the American U-2.

The U-2, piloted by Francis Gary Powers, was shot down on May 1, 1960, disrupting a summit meeting 19 days later in Paris between President Dwight D. Eisenhower and Soviet leader Nikita S. Khrushchev and forcing the cancellation of another summit planned for later that year.

and its pilot in the operation.

The paper also disclosed for the first time that the Soviets sent up a new fighter plane and ordered its pilot to ram the U-2 in a suicide mission. The new fighter reached the U-2's altitude but failed to ram it.

The article, published three days before this year's May Day festivities, may have been intended to remind Soviet readers that U.S. actions have damaged superpower ties in the past. In recent days, Soviet officials have warned relations might suffer if Washington imposes sanctions on

Moscow in retaliation for its crack-down on the Baltic republic of Lith-

Red Star said that Khrushchev was atop Lenin's Mausoleum on Red Square watching the May Day parade when he learned that a new model Soviet SA-2 surface-to-air missile had brought down the U-2. The commander of the Soviet air defense forces, Marshal Sergei Biryuzov, climbed the mausoleum "carrying happy news, that the plane had been hit by the first rocket," the article said. "And Khrushchev, standing right there on the tribune, congratulated the marshal."

Khrushchev, in memoirs smugled to the West and published 1974, wrote that diplomats watch the parade knew something bigh happened because Biryuzov wo duty uniform rather than the par dress worn by the other military cers in Red Square.

Soviets hurrying to the May I parade in the Ural Mountain dy Sverdlovsk saw a far different si what appeared to be fireworks in the air, said the article, signed Col. A. Dokuchayev.
