Prosecutors agree to free $6 M of Noriega's assets
 Defense attorneys push for release of accounts

MIAMI (AP) — Federal prosecutors agreed Wednesday to release up to $6 million from Manuel Noriega's European bank accounts, saying they wanted to move quickly with the drug trafficking case against the former Panamanian leader.

Meanwhile, Panama's new government told the court it will file a $5.3 billion lawsuit against Noriega, accusing him of racketeering, including murder, theft and fraud against the Panamanian people.

U.S. District Judge William Hoeweler took note of the civil lawsuit, to be filed in the next two weeks, but said he wouldn't allow it to interfere with the criminal proceeding against Noriega.

Assistant U.S. attorney Michael Sullivan said the agreement to unfreeze $4.5 million to $6 million in assets solves a legal battle that began April 29, when defense attorneys threatened to withdraw from the case. They said the government's seizure of $20 million of Noriega's assets deprived them of fees and expenses.

Sullivan warned that judges both in the United States and Europe would have to approve the releases. "We have agreed to make our best effort to unfreeze accounts that are currently frozen in Europe," he said.

Lead defense attorney Frank Rubino said his team of five attorneys was satisfied with the agreement.

"We feel we now will have the ability to go forward and give Gen. Noriega the defense he deserves."

The agreement avoids a court fight over payments made by the CIA and other intelligence agencies to the former Panamanian leader. The defense has said the payments added up to $11 million, but the government has claimed the amount was much lower.

Hoeweler, who had warned prosecutors the government would have to justify its seizures unless it released funds for Noriega's defense, said he approved the deal. He added that it would allow the case to progress more quickly toward a planned Jan. 28 trial date.

Noriega, who surrendered to U.S. troops Jan. 4, is being held in the Metropolitan Correctional Center outside of Miami on a February 1988 indictment accusing him of taking $4.6 million in bribes from Colombia's Medellin drug cartel to turn Panama into a way station for cocaine trafficking.

After Hoeweler's ruling, Gregory Craig, an attorney from the Washington law firm Williams and Connolly, addressed the court, saying he represented the new government of Panama installed after the U.S. invasion last December.

House supports bill giving workers more active role

WASHINGTON (AP) — The House, by a vote of 327-93, overrode on Wednesday President Bush's veto of legislation to give millions of government workers the right to play a more active role in politics.

The House vote, well over the necessary two-thirds majority, sets up a showdown Thursday in the Senate, where a much closer outcome is expected.

The bill would remove many of the prohibitions in the 1939 Hatch Act, which now bars 3 million federal civil service and postal workers from actively participating in political parties or candidates' campaigns.

"Unlike all other workers or their neighbors for that matter, federal workers cannot legally take part in the most routine political activities, such as displaying yard signs or a bumper sticker, or stuffing envelopes," Rep. William Ford, D-Mich., one of the bill's chief sponsors, said.

More than half of the House's 176 Republicans, including GOP Leader Bob Michel of Illinois, bolted from the administration to support the veto override.

The Senate approved the bill by a potentially veto-overriding 67-30 vote in May.

Bush vetoed the bill last Friday, saying it "would inevitably lead to repoliticizing the federal work force" and "destroy its essential political neutrality."

"It ... would convert the present rule that partisan politicking by federal civil servants is prohibited, into a presumption that such partisan campaigning should be encouraged," he said.

The legislation would allow federal workers for the first time in five decades to attend political conventions and caucuses as delegates and speak at rallies on behalf of candidates on their own time.

It also would remove prohibitions that now forbid government workers from holding offices in local, state or national political organizations, or even soliciting donations from co-workers for federal employee and postal union political action committees.

But it would continue to bar federal workers from taking leaves of absence to seek elected public office or solicit campaign funds from the public on behalf of candidates.

Water-skiing stuntman gets hurt while filming television show

BRISBANE, Australia (AP) — A water-skiing stuntman was seriously injured Wednesday when a stunt being filmed for a U.S. television production went wrong.

Geoff Carrington, 30, who holds several world records for water-skiing, was to hit a ramp and soar over the speedboat towing him. The boat was then to lift off from a second ramp and fly into a specially constructed bait shop near the edge of the water.

Several practice runs went well, but during the actual filming the boat slowed unexpectedly as it hit the second ramp. This threw Carrington off-course and into a pier.

A medical team treated Carrington for more than 15 minutes before he was airlifted to the Gold Coast Hospital, where he was undergoing treatment for internal injuries.

The attempted stunt, which also called for the bait shop to explode with pyrotechnics when hit by the speedboat, was one of six stunts planned for a Fox Television special.
