Journalist remains in prison Bexar County sheriff reveals reporter's confidential source

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — The Bexar County sheriff dropped a bombshell in a jailed television reporter's case Thursday when he announced the name of a confidential source that the reporter had gone to jail to protect.

But it appeared the disclosure would not affect the status of KMOL-TV reporter Brian Karem, who has been in the Bexar County Adult Detention Center since June 27 serving a six-month term for contempt of court.

Karem has repeatedly refused to identify the person who arranged an interview with Henry David Hernandez, accused of killing a San Antonio police officer last year.

Defense attorneys and prosecutors say they have to know who arranged the interview to determine if the Hernandez interview is admissible in his trial.

Karem's attorney Larry Macon immediately sought Karem's release after Sheriff Harlon Copeland announced to a crowd of reporters that the reporter's source was Hernandez's cousin.

"There's no reason for Brian to be in jail when the chief law officer for Bexar County has determined the identity of the informant," Macon said. Macon filed a motion to dismiss the contempt of court finding, but State District Judge Pat Priest told Macon informally in chambers that the motion was meaningless.

Beth Taylor, who is prosecuting the case, agreed that the sheriff's announcement wouldn't change anything. "I don't see any point in commenting on it any further at this point," she said.

Karem said the sheriff's statements and the judge's response didn't change his position, either.

He also is attempting a state-by-state campaign to persuade legislatures to pass laws limiting terms of office.

"The Republicans are doing it because they are on the outside," Nader said in an interview with the Austin American-Statesman.

Such restrictions in Texas could transfer control of the state House from the Democrats to the Republicans. By the time the current, two-year House terms end in January, 29 representatives will have served 12 years or longer.

State GOP chairman Fred Meyer said current election laws provide "an unbelievable advantage to the incumbents."

In the Texas Senate, four Democrats have served more than 12 years: Tati Santiesteban of El Paso, who was defeated in his re-election bid this spring; Chet Brooks of Pasadena; Carl Parker of Port Arthur; and Carlos Truan of Corpus Christi.

A Republican senator, Ike Harris of Dallas, also has been in office more than 12 years.

Act Now

Crank Telephone Calls Most telephone calls are legitimate, but every now and then you may receive a call which is annoying or obscene. Texas criminal laws state a person commits an offense if he "causes or makes repeated telephone communications anonymously or in a manner reasonably likely to harass, annoy, alarm, torment, embarrass or offend another."

Proposals limit lawmakers' office terms

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas GOP and consumer activist Ralph Nader both are pushing proposals to limit lawmakers' terms of office.

The state GOP has included in its 1990 platform two planks that urge limiting state and federal lawmakers to 12 years in office.

Nader wants a constitutional amendment that would restrict members of the U.S. House to six terms and U.S. Senate members to two terms.

He did not go to prosecutors, primarily because of "innuendos" from the district attorney's office that one of Copeland's employees was the mediator.

"Why should I?" he asked Thursday. "They're the ones making the innuendos. If they think I'm the third party, what makes them think that I didn't cook up the allegation?"

Asked why he didn't try another authority after the judge, Copeland said, "I'm an authority."

He also is attempting a state-by-state campaign to persuade legislatures to pass laws limiting terms of office.

"The Republicans are doing it because they are on the outside," Nader said in an interview with the Austin American-Statesman.

Police force cracks down on river pirates

NEW BRAUNFELS (AP) — A special police task force has been set up here to ground "river pirates," loosely knit gangs who have robbed and harassed people riding inner tubes down the Comal River.

The young men would sit on a dam in the river and offer to help people who approached the four-foot drop in their inner tubes, police said.

But instead of helping, the youths dumped the tubers overboard and took their goods, police said.

The youths then would retreat into nearby brush.

The men, in their early to mid-20s, were so brazen they approached their victims soon after the attacks and tried to sell back the recently stolen possessions, said Sgt. John McEachern.

A crackdown earlier this month, in which 38 people were arrested for offenses ranging from public drunkenness to trespassing, has cut the thievery problem — at least for now, McEachern said.

Most of the problem has been along Dittlinger Dam downstream of the city tube chute at Landa Park.

The thievery has occurred the last two years, so police this year decided to raid the pirates before they began their raids, McEachern said.

"What we're trying to do is recognize the value of the tourist industry," McEachern said.

A chamber of commerce official estimated 10,000 people use the Comal River each summer weekend.

David Jefferson, a registered sanitarian at the department, said restaurants with scores of 95 or above generally have excellent operations and facilities.

Scores can be misleading, Jefferson said, because restaurants can get the same score by having several minor violations or a few major violations.

Jefferson said the department might close a restaurant if the score is below 60, the personnel have infectious diseases, the restaurant lacks adequate refrigeration, there is sewage backup in the building or the restaurant has a complete lack of sanitization for the food equipment.

The department inspects each restaurant every six months. Jefferson said a follow-up inspection is sometimes required if a restaurant has a four- or five-point violation that cannot be corrected during the inspection, or if there are numerous small violations.

Inspectors at the department are registered sanitarians.
