Prison official criticized for inmate hunt

AUSTIN (AP) — The admission by state prison board member Jerry Hodge that he took two friends on a prison training manhunt sparked calls Tuesday for Gov. Bill Clements to demand Hodge's resignation.

The governor said some of Hodge's actions — particularly allowing two people outside the criminal justice system to take part — were "inappropriate." But he said he wouldn't seek Hodge's resignation.

Clements did say, however, that the incident would be considered when he decides who he will appoint as the next chairman of the Texas Board of Criminal Justice. Chairman Charles Terrell steps down Sept. 1. Hodge has been vice chairman.

Sources in Austin said Clements had intended to announce Hodge's appointment Tuesday, but backed off in the wake of the revelations.

Clements denied he had chosen Terrell's successor. "Certainly I will have this in consideration when I make my ultimate decision," Clements said. "But as far as disqualifying him, I do not think that it does. I think he made a mistake. I think he's apologized for his mistake. I'm sure he will not do it again."

Hodge, 47, a former Amarillo mayor, acknowledged taking part in dog-training exercises in which an inmate was tracked down. He also acknowledged taking two others along with him and later presenting his companions jackets proclaiming the escapade "The Ultimate Hunt."

"Certainly, the use of the jackets and the phrase on the jacket was wrong and inappropriate," Clements said. "I also feel like having outside people on those exercises is inappropriate. I will make my views known to the board, and I'm sure in the future there will not be any outside people allowed for those exercises."

One of those taking part was Glenn McMennamy, a member of the state Department of Human Services board, Hodge said.

Calls for Hodge's resignation came Tuesday from the American Civil Liberties Union, Democratic gubernatorial candidate Ann Richards and a state lawmaker.

"Gov. Clements should call on Mr. Hodge to resign from the board," said Glenn Smith, an aide to Richards, adding that Richards doesn't object to training dogs to track down inmates. "I think the issue here is that a member of the board invited his friends along and made up jackets that said 'The Ultimate Hunt,'" Smith said. "Prisons are places for punishment and rehabilitation. It's hard to believe that someone chased down by dogs and horses for sport would come back on the streets rehabilitated."

Hodge earlier this month participated in a news conference for Republican gubernatorial candidate Clayton Williams Jr. Richards' spokesman said Williams "should discharge him of his responsibility and repudiate Mr. Hodge's unconscionable actions."

Williams' press secretary, Gordon Hensley, said the Republican candidate believes "there is no question that the jackets are inappropriate and allowing guests to be present is inappropriate."

"Mr. Williams clearly believes this matter needs to be looked into and should be investigated," Hensley said.

Texas ACLU legal director James Harrington called for the resignations of both Hodge and McMennamy.

"The importance of the positions which Mr. Hodge and Mr. McMennamy hold are too important for the lives of Texans to be entrusted to people who have so little respect and sensitivity for the dignity of individuals," Harrington wrote.

Residents: Fort Hood troops ready for rumored deployment

KILLEEN (AP) — Folks in this Army town know from experience that something is up at Fort Hood. Soldiers are updating wills and stockpiling desert gear. Rumors are flying.

But the Pentagon and the post refused to say Tuesday whether any troops have been or will be deployed to the Middle East.

"I can't speculate on that," said Fort Hood spokesman Maj. Jesse Seigal. "We have no comment."

"We simply haven't announced anything out of Fort Hood," a Pentagon spokeswoman said. The post is the largest armored post in the U.S. and home of the 1st Cavalry and 2nd Armored divisions. The Associated Press has quoted an Army source in Washington as saying troops from Fort Hood would be deployed.

The people of Killeen are sure that troops and equipment from their neighboring post will be involved somehow in the Persian Gulf.

"There's something going on," said Margaret Galindo, an employee at The German Restaurant in Killeen. "You don't see any GI's downtown. At lunch we usually have five or six, but I haven't seen a GI in 2 or 3 weeks."

Almost 70,000 people live in Killeen, located at the main entrance of Fort Hood. About 45,000 of them are military, their families or military retirees.

Bell County Justice of the Peace Robert Stubblefield said his office has been inundated with calls from soldiers who want to update their wills or designate power of attorney.

"I'm sure they are going over there," Stubblefield said. "Everybody kind of gets jittery and wants to get their stuff in order."

Others point to the run by soldiers on desert supplies at Army surplus stores.

The Fatigues and Things store was sold out of desert bandanas and camouflage, said assistant manager Maryann Carrillo. Canteens and desert goggles also were going fast.

Much of that equipment is issued by the Army, but Carrillo said soldiers are telling her the post is either out of the items, or they're afraid they won't get them in time.

"I know they are preparing for something," she said.

08602/Several soldiers in Killeen declined to be interviewed. Military officials prohibited interviews or picture-taking on the post.

Walter Clark, an employee at First National Bank and a customer at The German Restaurant, said he heard the 401st Military Police Company, which went to Panama during the U.S. invasion last December, had been ordered to go to Saudi Arabia.

But his lunch companion, Bobby Cranford, said, "You can hear any kind of rumor."

Residents agreed with President Bush's decision to send American troops to Saudi Arabia, but said they hoped Iraq would back down without a fight.

"I think with the troop buildup there's not going to be a lot of fighting," said Chuck Ritz, 46, an Army veteran who served two tours in Vietnam. "Our president will not hesitate to go all the way if he has to. But he's not going to push it."

At Fort Bliss near El Paso, meanwhile, workers were manning a 24-hour hotline to help families cope with the deployment of the 11th Air Defense Artillery to Saudi Arabia.

"There's a lot of fear out there," said Donna Santos, director of Army Community Services at the fort near El Paso. "A lot of concern."

The inquiry into the ownership of the trailer resulted from the discovery of an exempt license plate displayed on the vehicle.

The deputy contacted the advisor to the Parson's Mounted Cavalry and was informed the trailer should have been in the stables on FM 2818.

The trailer presently is being stored at Phil Thweatt wrecker service pending the return to the Parson's Mounted Cavalry. The subject is in custody of the Brazos County Sheriff's Department.

- A College Station woman reported her 1986 Honda Spree moped was stolen from the intersection of Office and Ball streets.

The investigation into the theft of a backpack from the Commons Dining Hall on Dec. 8, 1989, led to the identity of the responsible party. A warrant for the suspect's arrest was issued. The suspect plans to report to police after consultation with his attorney.

A College Station man reported he entered the study area in a room in the Zachry Engineering Center and observed an individual holding his wallet.

When questioned the suspect said he had found the wallet and was looking for identification. After the suspect's departure, the man noted $1 was missing from his wallet.

A Hearne man reported his blue nylon men's wallet was lost in the MSC basement men's room. An officer found the wallet on Hogg Street. The man reported $20 was missing from the wallet.

- The pool staff confirmed that a ring had been reported stolen on Aug. 3.

CRIMINAL MISCHIEF:

- Someone broke the right rear window of a Buick while it was in Parking Area 3.
- A security officer reported he had observed what appeared to be a theft in progress from the bicycle racks by Crocker Hall.

Investigation revealed a group had been riding around campus looking for a bicycle to "trash" to celebrate a birthday.

As they rode through Parking Area 3, they met an acquaintance and removed a blue Sears 10-speed girls bicycle from the Crocker Hall Bicycle rack. They placed it on the grill of a 1979 Jeep Cherokee.

One suspect remained in Parking Area 3 and did not accompany the others off campus. He advised officers they should proceed west on University Drive and turn off the highway onto a county road. The group set the bicycle in the road and ran over it several times with the jeep.

The bike was recovered by the investigating officer and placed into storage pending the identification of the rightful owner.

A College Station man reported someone bent the C.B. antenna on his 1978 Pontiac.

An officer observed the signs located at Houston and Russell streets had been severely damaged. It appeared someone had attempted to detach the signs from the pole.

Unknown persons cut the chain that secured the main gate at the Wofford Cain Pool.

During checks of resident halls, a security officer observed someone had entered a glass bulletin board display case and burned two pieces of paper on the cork board. Damage to the property was limited to the glass door and cork board.

Act Now

Questions frequently asked by drivers are, "When traveling alone, what can I do to be safer?" and "If my car breaks down on the road, what should I do?"

The Crime Prevention Unit with Texas A&M's University Police Department has the following tips for drivers:

- Try to avoid breakdowns by keeping your car in good running condition.
- Check battery cables, belts, tires, oil and radiator at least once a month. Make sure you have adequate gasoline and money to get to and from your destination.
- If your car breaks down, raise the hood, use flares or tie a white cloth to the door handle. Stay in the locked car and when someone stops, ask them to phone for help.
- Should someone try to get into the car with you, honk your horn repeatedly and turn on your emergency flashers. If possible, pull back onto the roadway so passing motorists will know you are in trouble.
- Try not to travel alone at night and plan your route in advance. Be prepared.
- Make and carry an emergency kit with flares, flat fix, sand aids, signs, as well as a pencil and paper to write a phone number on.
