Police search for burglars of Circle K

Brazos County Crime Stoppers is seeking information about a robbery at a Circle K store in Bryan.

Police say two African-American men entered a Circle K store in the 2800 block of north Texas Avenue in Bryan around 3 a.m. on Tuesday, April 17.

One man stayed near the front counter, while the other confronted the clerk in the back of the store. Police said one of the men threatened the clerk with a metal pipe, made him lie on the floor, and stole his wallet and watch, while the other emptied the register.

The men also grabbed a rack of cigarettes, containing approximately 150 packs, and fled around the north side of the building, according to police reports.

A detailed description is available for only one of the men. He is described as a 6-foot tall, 145-pound African-American man in his 30s with wiry Afro-style hair, a beard and a gold tooth.

Bryan detectives report the suspects were familiar with the operations of the store and that they probably parked a vehicle on the north side of the store.

This week the Bryan Police Department and Crime Stoppers needs your help in identifying those responsible for this robbery.

If you have information that could be helpful, call Crime Stoppers at 775-TIPS. When you call, Crime Stoppers will assign you a coded number to protect your identity.

If your call leads to an arrest and grand jury indictment, Crime Stoppers will pay you up to $1,000 in cash. Crime Stoppers also pays cash for information on any felony crime or the location of a wanted fugitive.

In Advance

Graduate students can attend orientation Friday

New Texas A&M graduate students can attend orientation Friday.

Campus walking tours start at 9 a.m. Friday, and an orientation program is at 10 a.m. in Rudder Forum.

Guest speakers will be Dr. E. Dean Gage, provost and vice president for academic affairs, Dr. John Koldus, vice president for student services, and Dr. Larry Guseman, director of the Office of Graduate Studies.

More information can be obtained by calling Lesley Stoup, 845-1279.

Conference discusses issues for older students

The Off Campus Center and Students Over Traditional Age will present "Transitions: An Orientation for Aggies Over 25" from 8:30 a.m. to 1 p.m. Saturday.

The conference will discuss University support for Aggies older than 25, study skills and time management, and Aggie history and traditions. Additionally, Jane Mobley will speak about life as an older Aggie.

The conference is open to new and current students. Attendance is free.

More information can be obtained by calling the Off Campus Center, 845-1741.

Minority freshmen may still sign up for program

Incoming minority freshmen not registered for the two-day Excellence Uniting Culture, Education and Leadership program still can register at the Department of Multicultural Services from 3 to 5 p.m. Friday in 201 MSC.

The program, which begins Saturday, will help students with the transition from high school to college and deal with various problems they might face.

A representative with the program said it helps students validate their ethnicity while easing them into the Aggie spirit.

More information can be obtained by calling 845-4551.

MSC Jordan presents nostalgic A&M film

The MSC Jordan Institute will present "We've Never Been Licked" at 8 p.m. Thursday in Rudder Auditorium.

The film follows the life and death of an A&M student who's a Congressional Medal of Honor winner.

Admission is $2 and open to A&M students, faculty or staff. Tickets can be purchased at the MSC box office in Rudder Tower.

Two men bitten by Gulf sharks

ARANSAS PASS (AP) — One of two men bitten by sharks in the Gulf of Mexico this weekend says he'll fish from a boat from now on.

Jimmy Allen, 18, of Aransas Pass, and an unidentified surfer were bitten off of Mustang Island, but authorities said neither victim was seriously injured and there is no cause for alarm.

Allen said a shark bit him in about seven feet of water between two sandbars where he was fishing for speckled trout about 1:30 p.m. Sunday near Port Aransas.

"I felt his skin rub against my leg before he attacked me, so I guess I made him mad," Allen said Tuesday. "I felt the teeth, so then I knew what was going on. By then, I was getting out of there."

He didn't see the shark, but said he recognized the texture of shark skin from his experience shark fishing. Allen said he swam for shore, about 50 yards away.

"When I got back to the beach, I didn't know I was cut, until I saw the blood," Allen said.

He described his injuries as "sort of like razor blade cuts" on a five-inch area of his right calf. They did not require stitches, but he said he plans to have a tetanus shot.

"I felt his skin rub against my leg before he attacked me, so I guess I made him mad. I felt the teeth, so then I knew what was going on. By then, I was getting out of there."

—Jimmy Allen, shark attack victim

Allen said he doesn't intend to wade-fish any more. "I'll probably go out there in a little boat," Allen said. Tourism officials said no unusual reports of shark activity have been reported.

McDonald's serves lunch in school

SAN ANTONIO (AP) — Usually, the last place a high school principal wants to find students at lunchtime is hanging out at a fast food restaurant.

But it's OK at Holy Cross High School, where the nearest McDonald's is right on the property — a first in the nation, the company says.

Like most ideas, the on-campus McDonald's was born of necessity. Holy Cross wasn't making any money on its cafeteria. The fare — surplus rice and cheese and canned food — wasn't making much headway with the kids.

So a local McDonald's franchisee whose son attends the school proposed bringing Ronald McDonald to the kids. "At first I thought it was a crazy idea," said franchisee Richard Contreras. "But the more I thought about it, the more I thought I could make it work."

McDonald's Holy Cross opened Monday, staffed by McDonald's employees dressed in blue McDonald's uniforms and served in McDonald's containers. Contreras said he was motivated by word of the school's financial plight.

Principal Peter Mullett said school trustees faced a $50,000 budget deficit, half of which came from operating the cafeteria. The Catholic school had depend on federal subsidies and surplus cheese and rice to help pay grocery bills. But that ended two years ago after students complained about the food, Mullett said.

Last year the school tried to operate the cafeteria without any subsidies and discovered that wholesale food from cans was just as unappetizing to the students. Add to that an expensive workers' compensation bill.

"We just couldn't afford to feed the kids," Mullett said. "Three or four people in the kitchen cost more in workers' comp than the entire faculty of 22 teachers."

Football woes receive priority over reforms

AUSTIN (AP) — School finance reform and welfare funding didn't get the same attention from state lawmakers that the possible breakup of the Southwest Conference has.

"I'm appalled," said Mary Dees, spokeswoman for the Texas Mental Health Consumers. She and other activists say lawmakers have dragged their feet on many issues, the Austin American-Statesman reported Tuesday.

For example, it took three special sessions for the Legislature to answer a Texas Supreme Court order to change the public education funding system. And the welfare budget is so troubled that Medicaid payments recently were suspended for 10 days.

But when the University of Texas and Texas A&M University said they were thinking about leaving the SWC, many lawmakers quickly huddled. Their response showed the peculiar priorities in Texas, said Dees and others.

"When we do this kind of thing, we end up looking rather frivolous," said Genevieve Hearon, past president of the Texas Alliance for the Mentally III.
